Emergency Proved That Velie Runs on Kerosene

J. A. O'Leary, of Iowa City, Iowa, dependend upon the garage man to keep the fuel tank of his Velie Six ul of gasoline. When twelve miles from nowhere the Velie lost its "pep," topped quietly and refused to go stopped quietly and refused to go further.

Investigation proved that there was rothing wrong with the car, but that the tank was empty—the garage man had failed in his duty.

A jaunt of half a mile to the nearest farmhouse found them out of gasoline, but possessors of a goodlystock of kerosene. Mr. O'Leary borrowed two gallons of the illuminating oil and poured it into the tank of the Velie. The motor started promptly and he proceeded on his way to town. The car ran finely and completed the trip on pure kerosene without a particle of trouble.
