

GAS MASK DRILLS AT CAMP HANCOCK TESTS ARE HARD

Pennsylvania Soldiers Are Being Instructed in Important Work

Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga., March 5.—With the fate of the American heroes who died recently in France in a gas attack by the Germans in mind, no effort is to be lost to make the Twenty-eighth Division at Camp Hancock as immune from the deadly fumes as application to training can accomplish. They are to be taught every phase of a gas attack and how to resist it.

When they get across, the Pennsylvania Soldiers will be able to adjust a gas mask within six or eight seconds, thus practically obliterating the danger from the atrocious war weapon.

Gas mask drill is being given regularly by the division gas instructor, Captain Lee Stone, and his assistants, among them are numbered members of the French and British military missions assigned to Camp Hancock.

Through Training

Not alone the men being taught how to adjust a gas mask, but they are shown how to do it properly and are put through the actualities of a gas attack by going into the gas chamber filled with asphyxiating fumes. With the gas masks on, the soldiers are free from danger. It is just another way of getting them accustomed to what they will run into when they get "over there."

Gas drill is one of the most interesting of drills at the camp and, as it is in a way akin to self-preservation methods, the Pennsylvanians are going at it with a will and are putting "zip" into the work.

How to Detect Gas

Another phase of the gas defense drill that is to be undertaken by the division is the detecting of gas. This, a most important part, requires the attention of a specialist, who, with keen nose and alert olfactory organs, can determine the approach of the gas and sound the warning in time enough for his comrades to adjust their masks before the gas cloud arrives.

This phase is to be taught at the division school of gas immediately and non-coms of all units of the course. Special attention has been given to the picking of the non-commissioned officers for this duty, as it requires a man of much intelligence.

LOVETT'S DUTIES ARE IMPORTANT; EXTENSION HEAD

Union Pacific Official Will Direct All Railroad Improvements During War

Washington, March 5.—Robert B. Lovett, former chairman of the board of the Union Pacific and priorities director of the War Industries Board, has been appointed by Director-General McAdoo chief of a new division of betterments and additions to the Railroad Administration. It was announced yesterday.

He has resigned from the Union Pacific and from the War Industries Board and has given up all his other corporate interests to take charge of railroad improvements under Government operation.

Judge Lovett will hold one of the most important positions in the Railroad Administration. He will supervise the big program of extensions

Cuts His Duties

As director of priorities for the War Industries Board, Judge Lovett's duties had been greatly curtailed by the absorption of transportation priority functions by the Railroad Administration and the exercise of contemplated for this year, particularly relating to terminal construction, and will determine what improvements are essential and what should be postponed until the close of the war.

Improvements Needed

Reports of railroads, now being tabulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission and Railroad Administration officials, show the improvements railroads had planned for this year if private operation had continued. These reports also are being examined by a committee of railway engineers, acting for Director-General McAdoo, with a view to trimming the estimates in the light of emergency war needs.

Judge Lovett is expected to form a national organization, including railway vice-presidents in charge of improvements and extensions on their respective lines. Every proposed expenditure for these purposes will be closely scrutinized before being approved. The new division will work closely with the division of finance and purchases, directed by John Skelton Williams, who plans to centralize purchases for all the roads.

Charges Settled

Charges of embezzlement against representatives of the Hillside Coal Company were withdrawn by Charles Kaufman, 1117 North Third street, at a hearing in the office of Alderman James B. Deshong, last night when the $400 in question were paid him.

Death of Pupil Leads to Arrest of Teacher

Jeannette, Pa., March 5.—Miss Margaret Small, 20 years old, teacher in the Penn township school, was held for court by Justice Tussey here yesterday in connection with the death of Esther Holmes, 14 years old, whose skull was fractured, it is alleged, by a blow from a paddle with which the teacher was chastising the girl, one of her pupils.

Dr. J. F. Long testified to the cause of the child's death, and Eula Hopkins, schoolmate of the Holmes girl, testified that the teacher struck the Holmes girl over the right eye with a paddle. Ten days later she died.

The teacher wept throughout the hearing. At its conclusion she was taken to Greensburg and late yesterday was released in $3,000 bail by permission of the District Attorney.

VOLUNTEERS FOR WAR WORK BEING SOUGHT

Volunteers to do war relief work in France are being sought by the Harrisburg chapter, American Red Cross. These workers are to assist in restoring the devastated country and villages throughout France and parts of territory recovered from the Germans. The war relief committee, having the work in charge, now has 488 men and women working in France among the villages. Nine hospitals have already been started in the French villages for men who have been wounded so badly that they cannot do further service.

Further information about this work of restoration may be obtained from Red Cross headquarters in the basement of the Public Library.

FINAL TRIBUTE TO DEAD ARCHBISHOP

Philadelphia, March 5.—A never-ending silent line of sorrowing men, women and children moved slowly through the rain into the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul for eight hours yesterday and last night, paying final tribute to Archbishop Edmund F. Prendergast.

It was a line that reached two abreast down Eighteenth street to Race and east on Race for two blocks. It constantly moved forward into the great church doors, down the central aisle to the catafalque where the dead prelate lay in state in his pontifical vestments. And yet it remained a line three blocks long until long into the night.
