FLOOD DRIVES MANY FROM THEIR HOMES

police-men have been working for hours in boats rescuing residents from their inundated homes. So far as is known no lives have been lost. The Erie street railroad tracks are under water and no trains are moving over that road. The flood extends forty miles down the Kanawha river, almost to Corning. Rain continues late this morning and the water is still rising. Soon after the storm broke and a flood was threatened the girls in the Howell Telephone Exchange sent warnings to persons living in the danger districts, probably saving many from harm and possible death.

Va., March 14.—The crest of the flood in the Kanawha river reached here this morning with the gauges registering 36 feet and at 9.30 o'clock the United States engineers' office reported the waters had commenced to recede. As there was no rainfall during the night in the upper reaches of the stream it was expected the flood would subside rapidly during the day. The Elk river, which waters the Kanawha here, also began to fall, although reports received from up river points by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company before its lines went down last night were to the effect that a large volume of water was yet to come out of that region.
