

Reading for Women and all the Family

DON'T DO IT

Madame, don't do it. Don't mistrust Uncle Sam. Believe him when he says, "we can not and will not export more than our savings, for our own people must also be fed."

When you read that the Allies are short 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, don't show your appreciation of the fact by putting on your hat, going down to Cooper's grocery store, and in a whisper ordering a barrel of wheat flour to be sent to your house at once. And after you have done this, don't tell yourself that in your case it is all right, because it was prompted by a spirit of self-preservation.

Low the matter straight in the face. The supplies sent to the Allies are sent month by month, and the amount sent them is exactly the amount the good American housewife has saved from her daily bread, and not a pound more.

You don't need that barrel of flour, any more this year than you did last year or the year before.

You say perhaps, that you are just one individual, and that the little food you hoard doesn't count. But if all the "just one individuals" in the country bought a barrel of flour, it would stop all the shipments of wheat to our associates in this war for three months. Madame, don't do it!

When the stores hoard, their licenses are taken away from them, and a supply on hand for over thirty days is considered in the eyes of the law as hoarding.

There can not be such drastic legal laws laid down for the householder, but there are even more drastic moral laws laid down for her. Any person in the United States, who buys more food than he customarily keeps at home in peacetime is defeating the Food Administration in its purpose to secure a just distribution of food and in its great endeavor to reduce prices.

The hoarding of food in households is not only unnecessary, as the Government is protecting the food supply of our people, but it is selfish and is a cause of high prices.

If you lived in England and were caught hoarding, you would pay your fine and lose your hoard.

The following story is taken from an English news release:

"Annie Robison, of Cargo Fleet, England, is in jail. She has been sentenced to serve three months. Annie's daughter was a grocer's assistant. She had access to foods that could be sneaked home without the knowledge of the ministry of food. Among other things she had taken home, and of which her mother was found guilty of hoarding, were 42 pounds of sugar and small quantities of condensed milk and tea. Annie violated a food law, when she hoarded the sugar, and now she is being made to pay the penalty."

Told He'd Die in Few Days, Consumptive Ends Life

Sharon, Pa. — Having only a few more days to live, Martin Peto, aged 29, made his will, sent letters to his wife and friends, arranged for the funeral and then shot himself through the heart with a revolver.

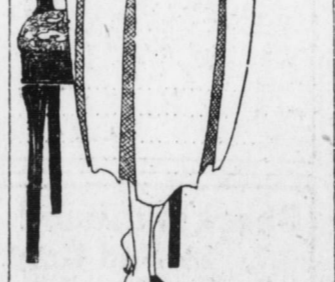

He was a victim of tuberculosis and had been in a sanatorium at Akron, Ohio. Told by the physicians that he was marked for death, he grew despondent and decided that suicide was the easiest way out of it.

IN IMITATION LINEN.

There are so many delightful lines substitutes this season that the girl who cannot afford real linen need not be discouraged. This attractive one-piece frock is in a combination of linen and cotton, the color being wedgewood blue. The large plaits in the skirt are laid over gores of checked imitation linen and the same material forms the belt, collar and cuffs. Medium size requires 1 1/2 yards plain and 2 1/2 yards checked material.

CHAPTER XXXII

If you do not object, Aunt Amanda, Cynthia ventured timidly, "I will ask you to leave me at Mr. Van Saun's. I told him I would come and read to him for an hour late this afternoon. And it is only a quarter of five now."

"But you will miss your tea," Mrs. Livingstone demurred.

"I don't want any tea," Cynthia replied. Mr. Van Saun always offers it to me, but, as he does not take it, neither do I."

Mrs. Livingstone directed Oscar to stop at Mr. Van Saun's on his way uptown.

"I will walk home from there," Cynthia said. "I will be in plenty of time to dress for dinner."

Mrs. Livingstone uttered no protest, but she did say: "I hope Milton will not escort you home. Under the circumstances it would be better that he should not—and it is quite unnecessary."

"Entirely unnecessary," her niece agreed. "I heard him tell Dora that he would be detained downtown until after dinner to-night—so he will not be at his father's before I leave there."

She did not add that she was glad this was true, that she was desirous of avoiding Milton as Mrs. Livingstone was to have her avoid him.

Edward Van Saun greeted the girl cordially and affectionately.

"It is good of you to keep an engagement with an old man," he said. "I have been sitting here thinking of how much brightness your visits always bring."

"I am glad," Cynthia said sincerely. "Coming here is one of the very bright spots for me. I was sorry to have to telephone you that I could not come until five—but Aunt Amanda wanted me to go downtown with her for a while."

"You know," he reminded her, "that one of our arrangements is that you are to tell me if, at any time, coming here interferes with other plans. Is everybody well at the Livingstones'?"

"Glad welcome," Cynthia answered. "That is the reason I went downtown in her place. Some things had to be tried on, and she and I are so nearly the same size that, except for articles that require very particular fitting, I can serve as a model for her."

"You may be about the same figure, yet you are absolutely dissimilar in other ways. I do not think that two girls could be more unlike in face and character—even if you are first cousins."

"That may be one reason we get on so well together," Cynthia suggested. "Like does not always attract like. Now shall I begin our reading?"

"If you please," Edward Van Saun replied.

He leaned back in his great chair and listened as she read. Her voice was most musical, that she was excellent. Her father had certainly trained her well if he had been her instructor in reading aloud.

She made a very lovely picture, too, the man mused, his eyes resting on her affectionately. The glow of the reading light, a little above her, fell upon her face, casting the shadow from her long dark lashes across her delicately curved cheek. It also brought out the copper glint in her Auburn hair.

The hand that held the book was white and well shaped, the wrist beautifully rounded. It must be true, since she said it, that she and Dora were of the same figure, yet Dora gave one the impression of robustness that this girl's appearance did not convey. Could it be the difference in the expression of countenance and in the manner of the two girls that accentuated the contrast between them?

Yet, he reflected, Dora was a dear child. He had been very glad that Milton was engaged to her. He had hoped that she might be as happy as he and his wife had been during the few years they had lived together. His eyes grew suddenly misty when he remembered those years. But he and his wife had had a background of deep and tender love to make them happy. He hoped Dora and Milton had such a background.

A Doubt Stirs Him

Doubt on this subject had not occurred to him until lately—perhaps not until Cynthia Long had begun coming here regularly. Somehow there was something about her that reminded him of the woman whom he had loved and lost when her only son was a little boy. Cynthia seemed to go deeper into the heart of things than Dora did. And of late Dora had spoken lightly, almost trivially of her engagement. Did she really love Milton? And did Milton love her?

The last question came to him with a shock. He had not considered the possibility of Milton's having made a mistake in his choice. That would be a catastrophe.

He moved nervously in his chair, and Cynthia, looking at him, said, "I beg your pardon, she said. 'Did you speak?'"

"No, child," he told her. "I did not."

"Perhaps you are tired," she suggested, glancing at her watch. "It is six o'clock already. I did not appreciate how time had flown. I must be going."

"Thank you for coming," he said. "I love to hear you read Peter Ibbetson. It is a beautiful love story. And I am old-fashioned enough to believe in love, you know."

"So am I," she admitted.

"It is a very sacred thing," he added musingly. "Too sacred a thing to be taken up lightly and handled heedlessly. It is no small offense to wound true love."

He said the words gravely, almost solemnly. His companion was silent.

"Good night," she murmured a moment later, holding out her hand. "Good night, my dear," he said kindly.

His thoughts seemed to be elsewhere, and she slipped quietly from the house, leaving him alone.

Duchess of Luxembourg Will Not Wed Any German

Geneva. — Several inhabitants of Luxembourg, including two judges, and also several Swiss tradesmen, have arrived in Zurich.

They declare that the refusal of the young duchess of Luxembourg to accept a Russian prince as a husband continues to cause the greatest irritation in Berlin royal circles. Nearly every three months a new prince is sent down to Luxembourg, and the duchess is obliged to receive him as a prospective suitor.

Face Wrinkled? Complexion Sallow?

Then Why Not Treat Your Skin As Beautiful French Women Do?

Paris—Science has discovered that faded, mottled, aged-looking complexions can be virtually renewed and made surprisingly beautiful by means of the following recipe: Merely wash your face with uttermost care in a teaspoonful of Creme Tokalon Hosted; wipe the face and apply Poudre Fascination—a very fine complexion powder prepared especially for shiny noses and bad complexions. If your face is badly wrinkled, get a box of Japanese Ice Pencils to use in connection with the roseated cream and you should get quick action on even the deepest wrinkles. Thus do famous French actresses preserve the rare beauty of their complexions, and if you were to pay hundreds of dollars for special treatment you probably would not be anything like as well off as by using this simple and inexpensive recipe. The articles mentioned above are supplied in this city by Gorgas, Kennedy, Croll Keller, Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart and Bowman & Co.—Advertisement.

How to Make Your Own Complexion Treatment at Home

A Free Oatmeal Prescription Does Its Work Overnight

New York: "It is my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," says Mae Edna Wilder, when her friends ask her about her wonderful complexion and the improved appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you follow my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every girl and woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it! All this change in a single night! I never tire of telling others just what brought about such remarkable results. Here is the identical prescription that removed every defect from my face, neck, hands and arms. Until you try it you can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription which you can prepare at your own home is as follows: Go to any grocery and get ten cents' worth of ordinary oatmeal, and from any drug store a bottle of Derwillo. Prepare the oatmeal as directed in every package of derwillo and apply at night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin appear transparent, smooth and velvety. I especially recommend it for a sallow skin, freckles, tan sun spots, coarse pores, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles. In fact, every blemish on the face, hands and arms are heir to from exposure. Apply this combination there and the objectionable defects will disappear as if by magic. It is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this oatmeal-derwillo combination will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours at the most.

Thousands who have used it report the same results I have had. Miss G. C. says: "My complexion was poor and my skin rough. My neck, chest, hands and arms were dark from exposure. The very first application of this wonderful Derwillo oatmeal combination convinced me that my poor complexion and skin blemishes would soon be a thing of the past. In a few weeks all these unsightly defects had entirely disappeared and I shall always use it to keep my complexion at its best all the time. I have recommended it to my girl friends and they are just as enthusiastic over it as I am. We all use it before going to the theatre, dances or parties and it is wonderful what a difference it makes in our appearance."

Mrs. G. Y. writes: "Oatmeal and Derwillo have worked miracles with my complexion. I had many deep-set wrinkles and freckles. My hands and arms were covered with freckles. After eight weeks use of Mae Edna Wilder's wonderful complexion prescription these objectionable defects have entirely vanished. I look ten years younger and advise every girl and woman to try it and I feel confident after one or two applications, they will use it continually and be just as favorably impressed with it as I am. I recommend it to all my friends."

Note—To get the best effect be sure to follow the complete directions contained in every package of derwillo. You have only to get derwillo and oatmeal. You need nothing else and it is so simple that any girl or woman can afford it. The manufacturer and druggists guarantee that there will be a noticeable improvement after the first application or they will refund the money. It is sold in this city under a money refund guarantee by all druggists, including H. C. Kennedy, J. Nelson Clark.
