fired from longer and heavier guns and with a more powerful propellant than we have any knowledge of."
From Paris has come the suggestion that the extraordinary range of the gun is due to the projectile being provided with a second charge, which explodes when the first stage of the flight is completed, giving it a fresh impetus. This theory is scouted by General O'Callaghan, as is also, the variant of it that the projectile is fitted with a propeller, enabling it to continue its journey when it no longer is driven by the projecting force from the gun.

"It would seem," says General O'Callaghan, "that a new departure in ballistics can alone explain the enormous range, which is three times that of anything hitherto accomplished."

ENGLISH RESUME RECRUITING TO FILL NEW GAPS

London, March 26.—To fill the gaps caused by the German advance in France, the authorities have decided to place the recruiting machinery in motion again throughout the country. In order to assist the Government the miners have placed the organization ers have placed the organization of their unions at the disposal of the recruiting officers.

FRANCE REPORTS DRIVE SLOWING UP

compelled to await development of the battle before meeting the onrush with counter measures. There is every sign in to-day's situation that the terrific attack, in which approximately one million Germans of all arms apparently are engaged, is being slackened. The resistance of the Allies seems firmer and the arrival on the scene of French reserves sent up to the southern flank brought welcome support to the British, who sustained the first powerful rush.

Ground of Little Value

The German divisions which began what evidently was intended to be an irresistible forward movement were so cut up that they were replaced by fresh formations. It is these divisions which have been checked at the positions on which it was foreseen by the Allied general that a stand would be made.

The ground over which the fighting has taken place possesses small tactical value, but it permitted the Allies to retire in perfect order. It had been devastated by the Germans before they retreated last year and the inhabitants had not had time or means to build it up again. While retiring across what was virtually fort to overcome the resistance he encountered.

fort to overcome the resistance he encountered.

First Rush Stopped

When the retiring British reached the Somme and the cannal they turned about and gave, battle, meeting repeated and long-sustained endeavors of both infantry, and cavalry.

The initial rush of the enemy seems to have been stopped. Military opinion generally is that this first phase of the great battle, in which even more troops were employed than in the battle of the Marne, gives no indication what the result will be. Nevertheless, developments are awaited by the Allies without anxiety.
