

Reading for Women and all the Family

Life's Problems Are Discussed

Below I am giving the stories of three women, who, with the best intentions in the world, nevertheless deliberately widened the "little rift within the lute," until they successfully rendered the music of their own lives mute.

Are you doing the same thing? These are true stories. This is the first:

His love for her was deep and sincere. She returned it. They were to have been married within a few months. All the little wealth-comes in their lives pointed toward happiness. Their tastes and interests and likes and dislikes were the same. But they were of different temperaments.

He was quiet and self-contained giving to musing a good deal on his work and its various problems. She was demonstrative and enjoyed talking everything over. He liked this phase of her, but she did not like his silences and preoccupation. She failed to respect his moods. She failed in sympathy and in the understanding of a nature unlike her own.

One day, half in jest, she said: "I don't believe you really love me." He hastened to assure her of his undying devotion. How could she doubt anything so rocklike? Soon afterward she again accused him of not caring for her. This time he was perplexed and pained. What was lacking in him, that he failed to make her completely happy? Why did she hold such an idea?

But she had found a way to rouse him from his absorbed musings, and she used it. On the smallest occasions, and far more often than she realized, she would say:

"I know you don't love me. You have never really loved me." He became restless, dissatisfied

Salvation Army Captain Praises Tanlac

Says It Brought Back His Old-Time Vim and Vigor

"Thanks to Tanlac I am back to my old energetic self and can once again do my work with enthusiasm," exclaims Captain M. Nelson, of 2218 Atlas St., Harrisburg, Pa., head of the Harrisburg Salvation Army Unit.

"I was all run down from working night and day.

"Something seemed to tell me to take Tanlac and it has done so much for me and I thought about a complete restoration of my health and strength that I feel that it is an evidence of God's love towards mankind to endow men with the talents to bring forth such a wonderful help to mankind as Tanlac."

"I want you to spread the news of my recovery broadcast for I feel that it is my duty to let every sufferer know of the wonderful results that Tanlac obtained for me."

Tanlac is now being introduced here at Gorgas' Drugstore.

and uneasy. He stopped trying to prove to her the absurdity of her doubts. Finally, he began to wonder if he did care so much for her after all. She seemed so sure that he didn't. Perhaps she was right.

One day she made the often-repeated statement, and he did not reply. She looked into his eyes; they were those of a stranger. She had suggested the idea to him so constantly, that at last he believed it. She was perfectly correct; he did not love her.

This is the second story:

A man had succeeded pretty well in business until a short time after he was married. He was perturbed, but not inordinately so; he had weathered storms before. But his wife was not so philosophical. She insisted that the slump in their affairs was due entirely to his errors of judgment and lack of business sense. She constantly took occasion to point out to him all of his faults and weaknesses of character. She taunted him with his inability to provide properly for her.

The result was that he became harassed and worried, and lost his nerve, his grip on his affairs. Everything slipped away from them, and the outcome was just as she had predicted. He could provide neither a home nor a living for her.

The reason for this was, that she was the more positive nature of the two. She had insisted so unhesitatingly upon her beliefs regarding him, that in spite of himself he yielded to the stronger will and accepted them.

This is the third incident:

A mother had a son who was inclined to be wayward. She was very ambitious for him, and in the hope of making him see the error of his ways she constantly harangued him on the subject of his bad conduct and reproached him for ingratitude. His past transgressions were dragged up and rehearsed. The blackest prophecies were made in regard to his future. The picture of a disreputable career was held before him until he achieved it.

Finally he left home, and became associated with some one who saw the real good in him and endeavored to bring it out by praise and encouragement and by stimulating his ambition. There was a complete and lasting change in the boy. All he needed was the sunshine of approbation and appreciation.

And the moral of these three stories is, that if bad seed can be thus sown and produce the results which we have all of us seen in our experience, the same is true of good seeds.

Or, to change the metaphor, why destroy your nice flute and silence the beautiful music, just for the sake of poking your mischievous fingers into the rift and widening it?

NO MORE "QUARTER IN THE SLOT" GAS METERS

There's no reason why you must simply accept a fact, and the fact is that no more quarter gas meters will be installed in our gay metropolis. The flat has come from L. S. Williams, manager of the Harrisburg Gas Company, who explains that war conditions make it difficult to secure meters and furthermore that they have always caused "a lot of trouble and annoyance."

The gas company will cheerfully remove any meters on demand, but positively will install no more. The quarter meter is therefore part of history, departed, faded, vanquished, with all its romance and tragedy, taking along with it memories of many a tragic moment when "the gas went out."

"It is in line with the policy of gas companies throughout the country," said Mr. Williams, "and for some months we have not been supplying them although there is plenty of demand."

U. S. TAKES OVER FARMS

Where there are to-day eight fine York county farms, bordering the banks of Marsh Creek, there will soon appear a huge United States government plant to be used for quartermaster's depot. Uncle Sam took title yesterday through his representative, Major Gray, constructing quartermaster, who has his office in the Franklin building in Locust street. The price is said to have been $150,000, although Major Gray would not verify that. An official announcement of the purchase will be made from Washington shortly.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

INSINCERE

I was taken ill a few weeks ago and sent to a hospital. I was in love with a young woman who, I am informed, associates and corresponds with other men. This perplexed me very much, and when I came to visit hospital I fell violently in love with my special nurse. Now I wish to have your advice as to whether I should continue my affair with my nurse or go back to my former sweetheart, who, I am afraid, is not so faithful as she should be.

VERY PERPLEXED

I don't believe you are very much in love with anyone. But you probably are very much in love with love. First, you left it standing at bay, and then you "fell violently in love" with your nurse. Find out what you mean by love and try to put a little more honesty and sincerity into your own expression of feeling.

DESERVES GOLD MEDAL FOR THIS

Cincinnati authority tells how to dry up a corn so it lifts out.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezeone applied directly on a tender, aching corn stops soreness so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A quarter of an ounce of freezeone costs very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to take off every hard or soft corn or callous. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue or skin.

They were to be distributed at a meeting of the Harrisburg Military Escort last night.
