ARGUE ELECTION CASE IN COURT

Use of Party Name in Contest Is Cause For Contention

Whether five electors in a district can secure exclusive right to the use of a party name after an election in which a sufficient number of votes were cast to establish the party in the county, and if they do secure such right they can prevent any person from becoming a candidate for a state office from that district unless their permission is given were points argued to-day before President Judge George Kunkel in a Philadelphia nomination contest.

George J. Campbell, residing in the Sixteenth Representative district, has filed nomination papers as a candidate for Representative on the Philadelphia ticket. The five electors of the party in the district filed objections, contending he had no permission from them to take the action, and asked the local court to declare the petition illegal.

Claude J. Roth, of Philadelphia, appeared to-day, representing Mr. Campbell, while Albert S. Millar appeared for the electors. Mr. Roth in his answer and argument contended that by reason of the big Town Meeting vote last November in Philadelphia the five electors had no right to pre-empt the name and take exclusive right to the title, therefore Mr. Campbell had the liberty to use it and become a candidate for a state office on the ticket, under the uniform primary act.

Mr. Millar contended the local vote in Philadelphia did not make the permanent improvement of the town. He quoted the act of 1913, a section of which provides that a political party in the state must have five per cent. of the total vote in at least ten counties in the state.

Deputy Attorney General William H. Kuller was present during the argument, at times expatiating various sections of the laws which were under discussion.

HARRISBURG ARTILLERY MAN IN FRANCE TELLS EXPERIENCE

Sergeant Albert H. Stackpole, in Letters Home, Relates Incidents in the Soldier's Life 'Over There'

Sergeant Albert H. Stackpole, at the headquarters of the Second Field Artillery Brigade, in France, has written some interesting letters to the home folks, extracts from which are printed herewith.

"I know you won't mind my writing this to you of the typewriter, as it is not only more convenient for me, but quite a bit more legible for you, I imagine. It's my first at a desk, and I'm glad to be among them, rather than some of the other combatants."

"Now we're out at a little station about three miles back of the front line, but it is a quiet sector and we are safely tucked away in a nice comfortable dugout. Mother, so you needn't worry at all. It's a darn sight safer here than Broadway on a busy night. Really, you ought to see this dugout. We mess in a little room at one end of it with a second lieutenant. They are awfully good fun. I think our table conversations have ranged all the way from the electoral systems of both countries, with a live discussion about our martyred presidents on the side, to the price of French wines and the end of the war and all in a mangled melange of French and English, all of which passed backward and forward in a lusty tone of voice, all of us laboring under the impression the louder the tone, the better the understanding."

"A frequent fancy of mine is that of a bath. I haven't had one for three weeks, but there is another matter. If I could be shown a nice big bathtub, filled with hot, steaming water and with about a dozen very good soap cakes, I would probably go raving crazy! Of course, these idle fancies are in vain here, but they do help. I have been away from camp for three weeks and naturally have received no mail at all. I am crazy to go back and find lots of letters there and a package with the war bread and some Telegraphs to be read from cover to cover, but all over again. I hope you'll continue the good work on the socks. I just wrote out a pair this afternoon hiking in boots from here to the front line and back. I wore out the heels of the socks and my own and I am sitting now in slippers and wooden shoes by the fire writing this on the mess table."

"Well, here I am, back in camp again (March 10th) and just having a good rest, but there is another thing to get back, spending most of our time in stations, waiting for long over-due trains. It seems that the French schedules are arranged so that the train you want to make always leaves about fifteen minutes before the one in which you are riding pulls in. The last ten miles we rode on a cattle train and used it for the bath house, where we took our first bath in three weeks. That evening I spent in giving the boys a long line about our experiences at the front. I had a bit of talk, and in reading with the greatest amount of joy the twenty-five letters which were waiting for me, dating from the 12th of January to the 20th of February. I certainly did have a time, and all of the Telegraphs for that same period.

"I had a good deal of the great surprise I had Saturday morning. I had gotten two packages of food and clothing Friday afternoon, but next morning they sent me word to come to the front. I had a bit of talk, and in reading with the greatest amount of joy the twenty-five letters which were waiting for me, dating from the 12th of January to the 20th of February. I certainly did have a time, and all of the Telegraphs for that same period.

"There are lots of German prisoners around here, but we are not allowed to speak to them or have anything to do with them. Some of them look to be no older than I and others quite old—gray beards, in fact. I feel sorry for them, for I think some of them may have come from quite decent homes and a few, the very young ones, look rather pathetic—sort of a dulled apathetic appearance, really, as though they had not yet realized that they were really in the war. A tough lot, and not one to be envied. They do menial labor about the camp."

"Thank you a thousand times for the packages. I received three in the last ten days, two with pajamas and chocolate, and one with a few more. The pajamas, as I may have said before, gave me a million-dollar sensation and the chocolate, being in company with the deleted affair they censor out to us here, was most acceptable and is disappearing with the speed of a snowball in Germany."

"Every one is all for him over here (Colonel McCloskey). The other night we were having a rehearsal, and the Colonel and the banjos were going like mad, when the door opened and the Colonel appeared. Everyone jumped to attention immediately, but he waved his hand and said he'd only dropped in to hear the music. He sat there with his kid officers and men and acted like a regular boy with them. They thought he was sick and rather a distinction with other officers of the post. His officers are very proud of him."

KEISTER MAY RUN CAMPAIGN

O'Neil Men Expect Him to Be the Chairman of Their Local Committee

Mayor Daniel L. Keister, of this city, will be the chairman of the O'Neil gubernatorial campaign in Harrisburg and possibly Dauphin county, according to what was learned to-day. The O'Neil headquarters were in town county and district chairmen in a short time for practically the whole state.

Petitions for Senator E. E. Beldeman, for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor, are being freely signed, not only in Dauphin, but in adjoining counties, and the Senator is getting ready for active campaign work. One of the interesting features of the campaign that petitions for the rival candidates for Secretary of Internal Affairs, Paul W. Houck and James H. Woodward, were in circulation on the Hill to-day. Mr. Houck's papers started around the department in charge of state administration to-day and Mr. Woodward came to town with his papers accompanied by Senator C. H. Kline and Representative W. J. McCaig, of Pittsburgh. "I am very much of a candidate. I am also one to be finished," said Mr. Woodward, "I have been in a dozen or so counties for a preliminary center and am very well satisfied with the prospects."

Commissioner O'Neil said, before leaving for Montgomery county, that he planned to spend Easter at home and would speak in a church at McKeesport Sunday. He will be in Pittsburgh Saturday and tour Washington county Monday.

The approach of Easter caused the capital to be deserted by state officials and attaches to-day and there were few left here this evening.

Continued Inquiry Jersey City, N. J., March 28.—The authorities investigating the explosion in the Jarvis Warehouse, Tuesday, which did $2,000,000 damage, destroyed war materials and shook the surrounding country, continued their inquiry to-day despite the statement of Jacob E. Altman that he accidentally caused the explosion by dropping a cigar.

TO HOLD PREPARATORY SERVICE Service preparatory to the holy communion and confirmation will be held in the Holy Trinity Church, Third and Chestnut streets, on Good Friday night at 7:45 o'clock.

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE By Dr. Lewis Baker The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms described are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, Collins' Style Shop, 34 N. Second St., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full names and addresses must be given, but only initials or fictitious names will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any stocked drugstore. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Henry F. writes: "Perhaps you can prescribe for me, as I am at a loss to understand my condition. For the past year have suffered extreme nervousness, trembling and extremities are cold. Have poor appetite, am weak, listless and no ambition to work or seek recreation. Am tired all the time. In no sense the strongest, capable man I was a few years ago."
