The War Comes Closer

With the confirmation of the drowning of Charles L. Phillips while in the service in foreign waters, the tragedies of war have been brought closer to our door.

Up to the time of his enlistment, this boy was still in his teens. Though not in the draft age, he was eager to serve his country and secured the necessary permission that made his enlistment possible.

He went before it was necessary for him to go. He gave the most precious gift with which Providence had blessed him—his life—and all this, that we back here, might still have preserved for us the human liberty which we have enjoyed and that the whole world might be made safe for democracy.

His former associates in the Housefurnishings Department, speak of him in kindest remembrance and are proud of having had him as one of the Bowman & Company organization.
