AMONG THE BEST STYLES.

The shops are showing tentative summer styles to tempt women who can no longer be seduced by winter goods. Here, for instance, is a figured check voile with skirt in bib and suspender effect. With it can be worn a simple bodice of crepe meteeor, lawn, handkerchief linen, etc. Tiny frills of self-material finish the collar and sleeves. Medium size requires 4 yards 36-inch material for the skirt and 2 1/2 yards 36-inch wide for the waist. Pictorial Review Waist No. 7617. Sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust. Price, 75c. Skirt No. 7685. Sizes, 24 to 34 inches waist. Price, 20 cents.

THEIR MARRIED LIFE

"How about a little poker to-night?" asked Mr. Thurston jovially. "Oh, do let's play poker," assented Mrs. Thurston, quickly. Helen, under cover of getting the cards, left the room and a second later called to Warren innocently: "Dear, won't you come and get them for me? They're at the top of the closet."

"What on earth are they doing there?" asked Warren, striding in. "Well, suppose they do, it won't hurt you for once will it? Haven't you seen those extra large hands when it comes to clothes, but here you are quarreling over the idea of losing a little bit of poker."

"But why can't we play bridge as usual?"

"Because I'm not going to be a skill-joy if you are. If the Thurstons want to play poker, we'll play. They're our guests." And Warren left the room precipitately, muttering something.

"Did you get the cards?" Helen heard Mrs. Thurston inquire sweetly. Helen knew that Mrs. Thurston understood perfectly that little pretense of calling Warren out for the cards, and her cheeks burned furiously. The woman was a cat, why had they invited her? It was Warren's idea of course, insisting on keeping up a friendship with the Thurstons when neither Mrs. Thurston nor Helen cared anything for each other's viewpoints, and Mrs. Thurston for one did not trouble to conceal her indifference.

"Well, poker isn't it, Mrs. Curtis," said Mr. Thurston, as Helen appeared with the cards.

Helen tried to smile naturally and only partly succeeded. "Do you play for stakes?" she asked sweetly.

"Just a nominal stake," said Mrs. Thurston smoothly, "fifteen-cent limit."

"When," whistled Warren.

"That too much?" asked Mr. Thurston.

"No, of course not," Warren returned. "We play for pennies, and though, whenever we play, which isn't often."

"But that's no fun at all," said Mrs. Thurston, "it doesn't matter to us," said Warren agreeably, "that's all."

Helen glanced that Mrs. Thurston eyed her closely and tantalizingly.

"Outwitting the Hun"

By Lieutenant Pat O'Brien

(Copyright, 1918, by Pat Alva O'Brien.)

"Must be a Yankee!" I overheard one officer say to another as I approached. "No one but a Yankee would have the cheek to show up that way, you know!"

But they laughed good-naturedly as I came up to them, welcomed me to the squadron and I was soon very much at home.

My squadron was one of four stationed at an airdrome about eight-toen miles back of the front. There were eighteen pilots in our squadron, which was a scout-squadron, scout machines carrying but one man.

A scout, sometimes called a fighting scout, has no bomb-dropping or reconnoitering to do. His duty is just to fight, and his order was given to me, "You are expected to pick fights and not wait until they come to you."

On my first flight, about five miles back of the lines in the daytime, our squadron usually conveys them. The bomb-droppers fly at about twelve feet or so above them to protect them.

If at any time they should be attacked, it is the duty of the scouts to dive down and carry on the fight, the orders of the bomb droppers being to go on dropping bombs and not to fight unless they have to.

There is seldom a time that machines go out over the lines on this work in the daytime that they are not attacked at some time or other, and so the scouts usually have plenty of work to do. In addition to these attacks, however, the squadron is invariably under constant bombardment from the German planes, but I don't worry very much, as we know pretty well how to avoid being hit from that quarter.

On my first flight, after joining the squadron, I was taken out over the lines to get a look at things, my location in case I was ever hit almost always assigned to special duty work, such as shooting up trenches at a height of fifty feet from the ground. I received my baptism into this kind of work the third time I went out over the lines, and I would recommend it to anyone who is hankering for excitement. You are not only apt to be attacked by hostile aircraft from above, but you are swept by machine gun fire from below. I have seen some of our machines and men go down, and sometimes so riddled with bullets that I wondered how they ever held together. Before we started out on one of these jobs, we were mighty careful to see that our motors were in perfect condition, because they told us the "war bread" was bad in Germany.

One morning, shortly after I joined the squadron, three of us started over the line on our own accord. We soon observed four enemy machines, two seaters, coming toward us. This type of machine is used by the Huns for artillery work and bomb dropping, and the observer also had a gun with which he could spray all around.

Patriotic Meeting at Camp Hill High School

Camp Hill, Pa., April 8.—Camp Hill's second patriotic meeting will be held in the High school auditorium to-morrow evening at 7.30. Dr. H. H. Longsdorf and Dr. A. N. Hagerly will be the principal speakers. The meeting is for the purpose of explaining the new Liberty Loan and for awakening new enthusiasm in the minds of the people.

The local committee consists of Professor Fred V. Rocky, chairman; U. G. Fry, A. W. Bowman and G. W. Ensign.

CALL FOR SERVICE
Lemoine, Pa., April 8.—Professor Harry Slothower, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Slothower, of Lemoine, and teacher of science at the Mount Union High school, has been examined for service in the Army. He spent the weekend with his parents and friends here. On Saturday he answered the call to report for physical examination before county board No. 1, at Carlisle, and was accepted for service.

L. S. HATFIELD III
West Fairview, Pa., April 8.—L. S. Hatfield, treasurer of the school board here for many years and a well-known resident, is seriously ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Collins, North Thirteenth street, Harrisburg. Mr. Hatfield has been active in borough affairs for many years.

Patriotic Meetings Planned For West Shore Towns

West Shore committees in charge of the patriotic meetings in the various districts this week have completed arrangements under the direction of the Cumberland County Public Safety Committee. Professor J. Kelso Green, superintendent of the public schools of Cumberland county, is chairman of the speakers' bureau of the committee. Meetings are scheduled for Lemoine, Shrewsbury, Camp Hill and West Fairview for Tuesday evening. On Thursday evening the meetings will be held at New Cumberland and Wormleysburg.

COMMITTEEMEN TO ATTEND
Wormleysburg, Pa., April 8.—Burgess J. Fred Hummel, chairman of the borough Liberty Loan campaign, has called a meeting of committee in the town hall this evening. Prominent residents of the town are being enlisted in the work by Burgess Hummel.

IMPROVEMENTS TO PLANT
Lemoine, Pa., April 8.—Improvements aggregating approximately $150,000 have been completed at the United Electric Company plant here, it was announced today. Work on the improvements have been underway for more than a year, but was held up considerably by the shortage of material and labor.

RECEPTION TO PASTOR

Lemoine, Pa., April 8.—The Rev. H. T. Searle, pastor of the United Evangelical Church, who has been reapointed to the local charge, was tendered a reception by members of the mothers' class of the Sunday school of which he is teacher. This is the fourth year of the Rev. Mr. Searle's pastorate here. A program was presented during the evening and consisted of a duet, solo and recitations. The Rev. W. E. Pefferly and Mrs. Beale took part in the program. The Rev. Mr. Searle made an address expressing his appreciation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: We are considered good-looking. We dress well and have many opportunities to meet men. Unfortunately, our school is not educational, so we do not have any opportunities to meet men.

We are members of the Y. W. C. A. and many clubs. Can you suggest a wise way of meeting men besides flirting with them?

BETTY: I am going to give you some emphatic advice against any temptations to flirt. And then I am going to add a word of advice. Be patient. In the natural course of events you do meet men, the brothers of your girl-friends, their acquaintances, the sons of friends of your family. Of course you long for gayety and romance and it doesn't wait to wait, but it often has to wait. Going out with the avowed purpose of making masculine acquaintances would do you no good. You are probably over-eager and so unattractive. Just be friendly, ready to give kindly interest to anyone you meet and eventually you will form a circle of friends that will include men as well as girls. This does not sound like very useful advice, I know, but it is the only safe advice I can give you. Just go along quietly and calmly make friends with all you meet, and don't run so eagerly after love that you frighten it away.

DON'T!
About a year ago a young man, whom I have known all my life, asked me to go with him for a carriage ride. After that he asked me to go with him every Sunday and sometimes in the evenings. When I didn't want to go he just insisted and said I had a standing order for every Sunday. He always seemed very proud to be with me. This kept up for three months, until the death of his father. After that he never came to see me again and made no excuses. When he meets me he smiles and passes on. Several times he has tried to avoid doing even that. Recently I heard from a friend of mine, who knows him, that he is taking out every Sunday evening another young woman. I haven't spoken a word to him, but have been greeting him cordially. But now I intend to cut him, because he is a cad and I don't want him to think I am running after him.

Don't cut this man. That is laying too much stress on the whole situation. If he is indeed the cad you think him, don't give him the satisfaction of realizing that anything he can do matters very much to you. If there is a possible explanation, why cut yourself off from it by denying the acquaintance? He can possibly think you are running after him if you just bow to him with quiet and different dignity. That is the way of good taste—take it. Cold politeness is your cue.

VICK'S VAPORUB

The machines that are used in France are controlled in two ways both by hands and feet, the feet working the yoke of rudder bar which controls the rudder; that steers the machine. The lateral controls are a fore and aft, which cause the machine to rise or lower, are controlled by a contrivance called a "joy stick." If, when flying in the air, a pilot should release his hold on this stick, it will gradually come back to the pilot.

If that position the machine will begin to climb. So if a pilot is shot and loses control of this "joy stick," his machine begins to ascend, and climbs into the angle formed, becoming inverted for it to continue to fall forward, pitching down at a terrific rate of speed and spinning at the same time. If the motor is still running, it naturally increases the speed much more than it would if the motor were shut off, and there is great danger that the wings will double up causing the machine to break apart. Although spins are made with the motor on, you are dropping like a ball being dropped out of the sky and the velocity increases with the power of the motor. This spinning nose dive has been frequently used in "stunt" flying in recent years, but is now put to practical use by pilots in getting away from hostile machines, for when a man is spinning it is almost impossible to hit him, and the man making the attack invariably thinks his enemy is going down to certain death in the spin.

This is all right when a man is over his own territory, because he can right his machine and come out of it; but if it happens over German territory, the Huns would only follow him down, and when he came out of the spin they would be above him, having all the advantage, and would shoot him down with ease. It is a good way of getting into a cloud, and is used very often by both sides, but it requires skill and courage by the pilot making it if he ever expects to come out alive. A spin being made by a pilot intentionally looks exactly like a spin that is made by a machine actually being shot down, so one never knows whether it is forced or intentional until the pilot either rights his machine and comes out of it, or crashes to the ground.
