

AIR DICTATOR TO DIRECT MAKING OF ARMY PLANES

Genuine "Speeding Up" Already Instigated by Potter; Coffin to Work

Washington, April 12.—It was learned at the War Department today that drastic reorganization of the aircraft production machinery is imminent.

contemplated. One of these will be the selection of a man of broad executive experience to head the new organization. The names of several men of national reputation under consideration are being carefully guarded until a final decision is reached.

Congress will be asked for legislation to allow a complete overhauling of the Aircraft Organization, and the Signal Corps will be eliminated from control over the aircraft work.

In some respects the action to be taken is entirely in line with that recommended by the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The principal recommendation of the Senate Committee was for a reorganization of the production machinery, but this step had already been definitely decided on before the report was made.

The Senate Committee also indicated that the taking of production out of the hands of the Signal Corps was essential to the success of the aircraft program.

The plans of Howard E. Coffin, chairman of the Aircraft Board, it is believed, will be utilized in the new organization.

23 Americans Die of Wounds in Battle

Washington, April 12.—Twenty-three killed in action—the largest number yet reported in a single day—and 211 dead, wounded or missing were reported in yesterday's casualty lists made public by the War Department. Two lists were given out. The delay in publishing the lists was due to the government's policy of first notifying the next of kin.

It is indicated here that the growing daily lists are due to the facts that Americans are now participating in the Picardy fighting, while at the same time there is renewed activity of the Germans against the sectors held by Pershing's men.

Five American officers are mentioned in today's lists. Lieut.-Col. Thomas J. Rogers of the Regular Army is reported slightly wounded. Major Edwin R. Kimble of the Engineer Corps has died of wounds received in battle.

"Come What May They Will Not Break Through"

The present struggle on the Western Front is known to the German people as "The Kaiser's Battle," according to the Washington Herald, and for this reason the higher powers realize that "it would hardly do to allow the Kaiser's name to be associated with a colossal military failure—as it would be if the present struggle were allowed to rest where it now stands." And so German legions fight desperately on in the hope of winning a decision. That their hopes are futile is the firm conviction of the Allied armies as evidenced by Premier Clemenceau's assertion that "come what may they will not break through," and the assurance of General Foch that "most glorious hopes are permissible." To these assurances is added the statement of Lloyd George that "the French and British are buoyed with the knowledge that the great Republic of the West will neglect no effort which can hasten its troops and its ships to Europe."
