Correspondents Are Fearless

"Of our men abroad, we gratefully acknowledge our appreciation. Torment and mines at sea and shot and shell on land have held no fears for them. Their escapes amid danger have been countless. One (Frank M. America) was knocked down by a Russian bomb in London, but worked all night as usual—merely an incident of the day's work in an office building which has itself been hit by such shells; another (Robert T. Small) fell into the icy Somme, but rode thirty-five miles to cable the story of the first American in Persone; another (Charles E. Thompson) was on the highest rampart of the castle of Gorizia when a shell buried it and him under earth, but on that afternoon in London, he wrote the press of Europe as well as of the United States; another (Walter Whiffen) was shot in the knee on a Russian observation post; another (George S. Smith) after a bayonet and fist encounter at Harbin escaped with painful lacerations; another (James Hickey) was blown through a glass pane by the Halifax explosion; but before dressing his wounds was resourceful enough to find in a demolished building the terminus of the cable to the West Indies and sent by way of Bermuda and Havana to New York the first direct messages out of Halifax. Such incidents are not unusual in the service of your organization.
