To the Mothers of the World

WHILE smoke of battle dims the sky And struggling nations lift their cry, God's ear still hears a mother's sigh!

He shares those weary, weary days Which wait unfolding of His ways, And sweet the whisper of His praise, "Yours is the deeper glory!"

As Mary stood on Calvary's hill, All motherhood is watching still In silent faith through good and ill. Upon a science-governed war The world has opened wide its door, But you gave life and love—and more, Yours is the deeper glory!

You bore a son, a man-child, given Fresh from the vaulted domes of Heaven. Now for his sake your soul is shriven! Hope on! Wait on! The dawn is near Of love "which casteth out all fear," And this, your son, shall proudly hear Yours was the deeper glory!

Should Fate decree the flag his shroud While rich and full his honors crowd, Upon your head in anguish bowed, Once close beneath your heart he lay Before that far-off natal day; War cannot take this thought away, Yours is the deeper glory!

ANNA HAMILTON WOOD.
