CAPITOL FOLKS NOT "ASSESSED"

Man on Campaign Collection Committee Says Only "Voluntary Gifts Are Wanted"

Dauphin countians holding positions in the state government may make "voluntary" contributions to the expenses of conducting the campaign in behalf of Highway Commissioner J. Denny O'Neil for the Republican nomination for governor, but after this news got out to-day, there were shrill declarations that no one was being "assessed." Emphasis was being put with the loud pedal on the "voluntary" feature of the "contributions."

According to reports, "Bert" Thomas and "Ed" First, two attaches of the Department of Education, have been visiting departments to see the Dauphin countians. It is said that they are part of a committee named by Mayor Daniel L. Keister, who is reported in charge of the O'Neil campaign here. Funds are needed. They always are in campaigns. Mr. Thomas said to-day that no one was being "held up" or "assessed," but that "voluntary" contributions would be received. He denied "swinging around" the departments to "round up" Dauphin people.

Both Governor Brumbaugh and Commissioner O'Neil are understood to be against the plan of "assessing" people connected with the state government for campaign expenses and one time last year when a state committee had made it was suggested in the executive department that the attaches buy Liberty Bonds. Both have been opposed in their remarks and speeches to involuntary work or contributions for political purposes.

Bids for furnishing supplies of various kinds to the state government for the year beginning June 1 were opened to-day without Governor Brumbaugh being present for the first time since he has been in office. State Treasurer Kephart and Auditor General Snyder contended a majority of the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings, which is in charge, and Deputy Attorney General Rogers L. Burnett told how Kuhn dropped into McConnellsburg, the county seat of Fulton, without a penny; how he borrowed a nickel for a sandwich from the 'bus driver who took him over the mountain from the little railway station at Fort Loudon and how, taking advantage of the clamor of the public for a railroad, he arose to the head of a venture that involved more than $200,000.

Engineers graded the mountain between Fort Loudon and McConnellsburg and considerable work was done on the roadbed, which was to have held trolley tracks for a distance of eight miles, when the project collapsed. Kuhn, through Myers, the government charges, secured funds from the Lemasters National Bank.

The bank assumes the position of having been ignorant of Myers' action until the crash came and a receivership was inevitable. Myers is a farmer and in an effort to save the bank turned over a $10,000 fund. Relatives also came to his rescue, but nearly every day a government inquiry increased the loss until it reached $125,000. Post, who was to have been the president of the railroad, and Shearer, his secretary, are charged with having been accomplices of Kuhn in obtaining the funds. The Lemasters Bank was a new institution, the officers, directors and stockholders being farmers in the fertile townships adjoining Fulton county. Fort Loudon is the last station but one on the old South Penn Railroad projected by the Vanderbilts as a short route through Southeastern Pennsylvania to Pittsburgh and now operated as a branch railroad of the Cumberland Valley Railroad, a Pennsylvania Railroad Company subsidiary. The case will occupy several days.

CROWD THREE DAYS' WORK IN ONE SESSION

Knights of Columbus Forego Pleasures and Formalities in Interest of War

In a wartime convention of the Pennsylvania Knights of Columbus held in Cathedral Hall, North and Church streets, and lasting but one day instead of the usual three days, war and its work made up a large part of the various addresses and talks. Particularly was the work of the Knights of Columbus in the great conflict considered.

When the work of the order in the war is considered mention is made of the brilliant record of Pennsylvania Knights. John B. McDonough, of Reading, Deputy Supreme Knight in quoting figures, says that out of a total of 28,588 Pennsylvania Knights 26,000 have enlisted for active war work in the several branches of service and practically all those who are staying at home are engaged in some other branch of work necessary to the successful prosecution of the war. McDonough quoted figures to show that during the recent successful Third Liberty Loan drive the Pennsylvania Knights of Columbus did their share by subscribing for over $3,000,000 worth of bonds.

All officers of the Pennsylvania State Council for the past year were re-elected for another year. They include John J. Rahilly, of Philadelphia, Past State Deputy Supreme Knight; John B. McDonough, of Reading, State Deputy Supreme Knight; Martin J. Brennan, of South Bethlehem, state secretary; M. A. Halloran, of McKeesport, state treasurer; W. W. Ryon, of Shamokin, state advocate; D. A. Keohane, of Philadelphia, state warden, and the Right Rev. J. F. Canevin, bishop of Pittsburgh, state chaplain.

Preceding the opening of the convention this morning the 160 delegates in attendance, almost to a man, attended solemn masses in the Cathedral at 9 o'clock. The Rev. D. J. Carey acted as high celebrant. Following high mass Bishop McDevitt made an address, in which patriotism was uppermost in his remarks. The gates proceeded to the hall where the convention got under way.

The meeting was called to order by John B. McDonough, State Deputy Supreme Knight, who presented statistics to prove the good work being done by Pennsylvania Knights during the present war and the progress made by the order in Pennsylvania. Quoting figures of the United States for 1917 and 1918, he showed that a net gain of 821 members had been made during the past year with a total enrollment of 26,858 members on May 1, 1918. Counting appointments were announced by the following: Credentials—J. A. Welsh, of Shamokin, chairman; E. A. Kelly, of Philadelphia; J. B. Hurley, of Washington, Pa.; D. J. Hannon, of Harrisburg; and R. J. Seitz, of Harrisburg.

Resolutions—W. W. Ryon, of Shamokin, chairman; C. B. Ward, of Pittsburgh; James Shovelin, of Lansford; P. A. Hart, of Philadelphia, and F. W. Martin, of Ridgway. Auditing—Joseph A. Fisher, of Pittsburgh, chairman; H. T. Correll, of Johnstown, and James E. Dougherty, of Philadelphia.

Press—E. S. McSwigan, of Pittsburgh, chairman; W. J. Schisler, of Wilkes-Barre; W. J. Schisler, of Altoona; Edward Michael Owski, of Sharsburg, and Charles Whitaker, of Shenandoah.

His report of officers of the organization were presented and accepted, after which reports and talks were given by various Knights of Columbus war work secretaries located in the various military camps and cantonments of the United States. Prominent among these latter speakers was Joseph A. Cunningham, formerly cartoonist and sports writer on the Philadelphia North American. J. F. Deegan, of Washington, D. C., director of operations of the Knights of Columbus Committee on War Activities, presented some interesting statistics concerning the work of members of the order in the service.

So that the convention might end to-day no intermission for luncheon was allowed at noon, the convention opening at 10.30 this morning, continuing in session this afternoon. In addition to special activities and other formalities were abandoned the convention might be brought to a close to-day.

Preliminary to the opening of the convention many of the visiting delegates attended a lecture of Dr. Sauvage, a French army chaplain, given in Cathedral Hall last evening. Dr. Sauvage in his talk dealt with war conditions on the other side and paid particular attention to the work being done by the Knights of Columbus.

U. S. Will Make Caproni Biplanes For France

Washington, May 14.—Signal corps officers yesterday said that many Caproni biplanes will be made in this country for the American Army in France. Although no contracts have been signed, it is expected that before the end of the year production in quantity of the new machine will be under way. The Caproni machines will be used for night bombing. The great success of this machine in recent raids over the German positions facing the lines held by the French have convinced the allied aviation experts that the Caproni design is the best for the heavy work required of a machine in darkness.

BLUE DEVILS ADD LIFE TO FLAGRAISING

below this place at 12.30 o'clock to-day.

Two weeks ago, plus one day, Major Morava established his headquarters here and with Rates and Rogers, the contractors, went to work on the project. Today he occupies large offices in a specially constructed building and temporary structures of frame have sprung up all over the big plot for more than a mile between the hills and the river and miles upon miles of railroad tracks have been laid. It was to celebrate the formal opening of the camp and to mark the successful completion of a large portion of the temporary buildings that Major Morava arranged to-day's meeting.

After lunch the more than 750 workmen employed on the job marched in military fashion from the dining halls two by two to meet the New Cumberland Band and surrounded the large platform in front of the tall steel flagpole, while Major Morava called the meeting to order and delivered the address of welcome to the guests on the occasion, who numbered among others Andrew S. Patterson, president of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce; William Jennings, of E. B. Cunningham and E. J. Stackpole, of Harrisburg; Captain Douglas Moore and Lieutenant Avery of the Military project.

The Spirit That Wins Major Morava spoke most enthusiastically of the work his men have done. "Why I have been here on this job at 6 o'clock in the morning, so fast they work," said he, "in order to be able to find my way among the buildings without a guide. Just for example, the other day a lieutenant and I walked down past the rising walls of a cement shed, and I had to step on there by the 'to-morrow' said the lieutenant, but when we returned an hour or so later the roof was in place."

"It is the spirit of patriotic service that is enabling us to erect a plish so much in our work here, which is nearly as important I think, as that which the boys are doing in Europe," he William Jennings, Jesse the big flag was raised by the young women of the office force while the band played the Star Spangled Banner and the audience joined in the anthem.

Jesse E. B. Cunningham delivered a patriotic address, in which he, too, spoke of the spirit of sacrifice and service so notable in the country as a result of the war and of the meaning of the flag.

Major Morava has told you he believes your work is nearly as important as that of the men abroad. I believe it is equally important, for only to the degree in which we stand back up and support the soldiers over there will they be successful," said he.

Mr. Stackpole, who toured Europe some years ago in company with Major Morava, spoke briefly, paying a high tribute to his talent and patriotism. As he concluded the audience opened a broad pathway to the speakers' stand and from away across the field, headed by several United States officers and the Motor Messengers of the Harrisburg Red Cross, streamed the Blue Devils of France, some of them struck their position in a long line across the platform. It was a most inspiring sight. None of the Frenchmen speak English so Corporal Austrand, of the United States Field Artillery, one of the fifty Americans sent home after seven months in the fighting, stepped to the platform, over, spoke for them. He made a plea for support at home in order that the troops might win over there and explained to the audience the decorations which the Blue Devils wore. The meeting was closed with brief remarks by Mrs. Dunkle, representing the Motor Messengers.
