BEFORE your boy "went over" he knew a mother's care. To deprive him of it now would handicap him tremendously.

You can't follow your boy to France, but you can and will insure all the loving care which you, yourself, would give him, by supporting the Red Cross.

The Red Cross is the world's international ideal of mercy. It knows no bounds of racial, religious or political separation. Its first duty is the protection of our soldiers in France. It co-operates with the Government at all times. Its organization, money and supplies are at the call of the American Army whenever and wherever needed. Also, it cares for the refugees and finds places for homeless children.

The spirit of the American people has made possible the prompt response of the Red Cross to the needs of war. Men, women and children have contributed a war fund of unprecedented size. Millions of women have given their time and energy to the making of supplies in homes and work rooms.

Thousands of specially qualified men and women have put their personal services at the command of the Red Cross for relief work both here and abroad.

Have you done your share in this noble work?—
