WHAT THE Y.M.C.A. DOES IN THE WAR

Earle Mark Writes of Welfare Work Among Boys in Camp and Trenches

A close-up view of the kind of work which is being done by the Y. M. C. A. for the comfort and welfare of the American soldier boys in the front line trench as well as the camps behind, is given in the latest letter received by Mrs. H. B. S. Mark, of the Rodeurum apartments, from her son, Earle Mark, of Lackawanna, N. Y., who is now homebound bound. Written under date of April 28, Mr. Mark says: "The past two weeks I have been doing nothing but night work and I now know what the little boy meant when left alone in a dark room, when he said 'I don't see anything, I feel them.' We load our big truck with supplies; they are driven so far and then when it is dark you pick up their loads on a Ford and drive to some place or canteen. If to a place you unload and then either carry or push it ahead of you. Sometimes we can use the little cars, which are about the size of a boy's express wagon, a track twelve inches wide running to poles of service. They are generally too busy to allow us the use of these cars, so it's walk and carry or crawl and push.

In Battery Pit "Last night while waiting my turn to go in, I got only a piece of chocolate, one hundred and two pounds, I found our canteen down a winding stairs in an old wine cellar, about twenty feet underground. I could not stand up going down the steps nor anywhere in the cellar, but found about fifty boys being served with hot chocolate and biscuits, all dying for smoke, but no smoking allowed anywhere near that place. In fact no talking was the order. I guess because of the dark and was what made the rats think 'nobody home.'"

Will Pass Each Other Secretary Mark left France enroute home by way of Ireland on May 5th, after an eight months' service among the soldier boys in France. It is a coincidence that probably his brother, Sergeant Major George Arthur Mark, of the 307th Engineer Regiment will pass him "somewhere on the Atlantic" without either knowing of the near presence of the other.

U. S. Officials Seek Best Way to Help Russ in Her Troubles

Washington, May 23.—In an effort to help Russia, officials here are giving consideration to several proposals. One phase of the program contemplates the restoration of the Trans-Siberian railway so as to insure the better shipment of relief supplies through Siberia into European Russia. Members and engineers of the American Railway Commission, who went to Japan when the Bolshevik government obtained control, are reported to be returning to Siberia with the intention of going to Volodga, where the Bolshevik government has been established and where David R. Francis, the American Ambassador, and other Allied diplomatic representatives are now residing. The Commission will consult with Ambassador Francis with a view to arranging a plan for improving Siberian railway facilities. Another scheme, said to be under serious consideration, contemplates the effective use of the American Red Cross in relieving distress in Russian territory. The government is said also to be considering a proposal to arrange war supplies available in Russia in order to prevent them from falling into the possession of Germany. An enormous expenditure of money would be required for these schemes. The supplies reported to be available include cotton and oil. Germany will go to extremes to obtain them. The object of these several schemes is to aid Russia to relieve the distress in that country with the possible advantage of earning the gratitude of the Russian people who might be disposed to show a friendly feeling toward the United States and the Allies in the struggle with the Central Powers.

Former Premier Kerensky's Trip

It is believed in well-informed circles here that the movements of Alexander Kerensky, technically Premier of Russia, whose provisional government was deprived of power by the Bolsheviks, are connected with the plans of the Allies concerning Russia. The most generally accepted view is that if Kerensky comes to the United States he will proceed to San Francisco and there take ship for Siberia, where the conservative elements of Russia are reported to be gathering. The Allies are said to be disposed to show a friendly feeling toward the United States and the Allies in the struggle with the Central Powers.
