PRINTERS OF NO. 14 OPPOSED TO LIQUOR

Solmers, president; Chester D. Rhinehart, vice-president, and William W. Byrem, secretary, these resolutions have been passed on the matters:

"Whereas the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor in convention assembled in Pittsburgh on May 12, 1918, passed a resolution calling on the Legislature of Pennsylvania to defeat the ratification of the federal amendment abolishing booze in this Commonwealth, and believing that that action of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor is not the sentiment of the entire membership of the locals represented in the federation and that the said resolution was passed hastily and without due consideration and that political influence entered into the convention to have this said resolution, and

"Whereas President Maurer had declared to the delegates of Harrisburg Typographical Union, No. 14, prior to the Harrisburg convention that he would have nothing to do with liquor legislation and that he thought it had no place in the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor,

"Resolved, that Harrisburg Typographical Union stands opposed to the present officers of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor inasmuch as their position was that of favoring the resolution under question, and he it further,

"Resolved, that Harrisburg Typographical Union hereby express its disapproval of the stand said to have been taken by James H. Maurer on problems vital to the winning of the war, that the union disapprove of President Maurer's action in refusing to extend courtesies to members of the British Labor Mission during their visit to Pennsylvania and at the same time commends the State Department in its refusal to issue passports to Mr. Maurer to go to England, where he intended to spread his ideas on labor which Harrisburg Typographical Union does not believe have the sanction of organized labor in Pennsylvania."

Adjusting Oneself To Conditions

There are two ways of living during war times.

One way is to buy less and make your money go round and the other is to pay more for the same things.

The street car business today costs more to operate than ever before.

Yet the five cent fare is in existence.

If Jim Jones ran a bus and didn't take in enough in fares to keep it going he would surely go out of business.

But that would affect ONLY Jim Jones.

If the street cars stop that affects us all—for we all need the street cars to go to and from work.

The jitneys charge five cents. But they would charge more than five cents if the street car fare were more.

The money the jitneys take in would help to pay some of the extra burdens the street cars must bear on account of war.

They take in that money in the summer time when travel is easy. In the winter time patrons of the jitneys must use the street cars—for the street cars are on the job all the year round.

Is it worth while for the people to let haphazard vehicles like the jitneys be one of the reasons why the street car fare might have to be raised in order to meet expenses?

Are the jitneys kept in repair and good condition? The street cars must be. And the street car lines are the travel roads for the jitneys.

And you can't ride as far in a jitney as you can in a street car for a nickel.

Isn't it worth more to ALL the people to keep the street cars going?
