Be Found by Alderman

Efforts to locate and arrest J. R. Bennett, a colored attorney charged with embezzlement, were continued to-day by constables in the city. Bennett had furnished $500 bail to appear before Alderman C. J. Householder to answer the charge but at the time for the hearing on Monday night he did not attend. Since then he has not been located and his bail has been forfeited. It was reported he had been seen at the courthouse yesterday afternoon. Robert Brown, colored, who preferred the charges, has also brought a suit against the Progressive Wage Earners' Building and Loan Association to recover money which he says he paid to the organization toward the purchase of a house in Steelton.

to lead Boy Scout troops were made public this morning by the local scout executive, J. Fredrik Virgin, and the field scout executive, V. L. Huntsberger. "It's going to be a real, smashing Hindenburg drive," Mr. Huntsberger said. "We are laying plans to open the drive in the near future." The necessity for the drive is apparent. The great need has been caused by the calling of many scoutmasters to service with the colors. In the twenty-two troops of the Harrisburg district, nine officials have already been called for service. A number of Harrisburg's prominent organizations will be allied with the local Scout Council in the carrying on of the drive. The goal will be at least fifty more scoutmasters. Street demonstrations of wigwagging, first aid and other Scout work and handiwork of Scouts with war garden products in the windows of local stores, will bring the campaign before the men it is desirable to reach, Scout officials say. Edward Manser, Ross H. Swope and William N. Frantz constitute the committee in charge of the scoutmasters campaign. It will be brought before men employed in industries not essential to the winning of the war. In harmony with the request of President Woodrow Wilson, the Iocal scouts are arranging to search the surrounding country for black walnut groves. This valuable wood is used for the manufacture of gun stocks.

Only 50 of 350 Yale Graduates Left by War

New Haven, June 19.—A little company of young men wearing somber black caps and gowns and led by a smaller squad of khaki and sallor blue marched through the Yale campus quietly yesterday and later received their diplomas after formal graduation exercises in Woolsey Hall. There was no blare of trumpets or sounds of drums. Just the ryhthmic tread of marching men. There were barely fifty of them left of a class of nearly 350, the rest being in the active service of their country.

They took their places beneath the elms in front of the stately Vanderbilt Hall. Their mothers and sweethearts were there, some of them hoping in their hearts that their boys would not be taken, but all of them ready to meet the sacrifice bravely should these remaining few youngsters of the graduating class of, 1913 be called to join their classmates.

There in the shadow of old Cannecticut Hall with its surrounding memorials decorated with dark green wreaths which had been placed upon them by the soldiers and sailors of Yale yesterday the members of the senior class held their class day exercises and bade their last intimate good-by to old Eli.
