AMERICA AND ITALY

THE good news from Italy is further enhanced by the announcement that American troops will be fighting soon on the Italian front. The Italians, by holding the Austrians at almost every turn and inflicting upon them tremendous losses for every foot of ground gained, have shown themselves the equal of any fighting forces on the fields of Europe, for they have been beset by overwhelmingly superior forces and by an immense concentration of artillery. It is to do or die with the Austrians and it begins to look as though the latter alternative would be forced upon them.

The Italians, by their stiff resistance and their actual gaining of ground in some sectors in the face of vigorous attacks, have set the military authorities at Washington to wondering whether the war might not be ended on the Italian front rather than along the line in France. It is known that General Pershing has had a decided preference for American concentration along the southern end of the French line, and it would be but a step further to Italy and a possible penetration of Austria, as the Italians originally planned and as they might have accomplished had they been given the aid they needed in ammunition and artillery in the early stages of the war.

Americans will be flappy to fight shoulder to shoulder with the gallant Italians. There is much similarity in their methods of war. The same spirit, dash and initiative that carry Americans to victory where less impetuous troops would fail characterize the Italian soldiers, and the two, side by side, ought to be able to account for double their number of tired and dispirited Austrians any day.

As suggested by the Sunday Courier, the gradual elimination of the smoke nuisance in Pittsburgh has made it clear that there is no excuse for an increase of the nuisance here and elsewhere. Pittsburgh is being cleaned up, and this city, as the seat of State government, must not submit to unnecessary smudging.

OUR "BLACK DEVILS"

HARRISBURG has not yet forgotten the inspiring visit of the "Blue Devils" of France and the presence of these doughty warriors of our French allies is still arousing enthusiasm throughout the country. But their coming to the United States has had another effect which is now manifesting itself on the fighting front on the other side. We refer to the negro soldiers of the United States.

A few days ago the Telegraph printed a letter from a colored man commenting upon the visit of the "Blue Devils" to this city and expressing the hope that the negro soldiers would be given a full chance to show what they could do in suppressing the Hun. He suggested the name and might the "Black Devils" might become quite as famous as their comrades of France. Now comes a story from overseas regarding the ambition of the negro soldiers to demonstrate their fighting qualities under their own officers.

While white officers have been assigned to the colored regiments, there are other units which are composed entirely of negro officers and men. These propose to demonstrate in Europe that the "Blue Devils" have nothing in fighting on the "Black Devils." And all who have watched the colored soldier and have noted his patriotism and bravery will not question the record of these colored regiments in the war for humanity. That they will justify the confidence of their superior officers admits of no doubt.

As a correspondent in France has suggested regarding the colored troops, "they are going where there is no color line; they are going for the purpose of proving that white and black both bleed red under the Stars and Stripes."

Conservation of food and clothing is being practiced more intensely than at any other period during the war. The savings of the people are going into the various Government securities, the small investments of the people finding their way naturally in the War Saving Stamps. All patriotic citizens are co-operating in this movement with a view to aiding the Government in the prosecution of the war and to supply our Allies with the necessary equipment and munitions.

THE NEW BRIDGE

ENDORSEMENT by J. E. Greiner of the State street monumental bridge idea in support of the recommendation of Arnold W. Brunner has double weight. In the first place, Mr. Greiner is a noted bridge designer. Secondly, but no less important, he drew the preliminary plans for the proposed structure at Walnut street and certainly would have advised no change from that location unless he was completely convinced that the State street bridge, as now planned, is far and away superior to the other.

With Mr. Greiner's expression of opinion doubtless the last objection to turning over the Walnut street fund to aid the State in the construction of a great boulevard bridge at State street will be banished and the city authorities can begin to prepare the necessary measures for the transfer with no fear that they are offending anybody or moving against the expressed wishes of the voters.

The State street viaduct, eighty feet wide and reaching from the new Capitol extension to the crest of the Hill near Thirteenth street, will be all that the Walnut street bridge could have been and far more. It will take care of all the traffic from the Walnut street area, by means of approaches from the south side of State street at intervals and will drain the north section of the Hill as well, letting traffic out on the west side of the railroad to flow north to North street or south to Walnut street over broad highways, thus relieving such a congestion as would have been inevitable with the one-outer Walnut street structure. In addition, it will carry the Capitol Park right up to the very doors of the people of the Hill and will enhance the value of property beyond Thirteenth street as well as along the crest to the south.

And best of all, the city does not have to pay more than the cost of the proposed commercial viaduct at Walnut street for the magnificent monumental bridge proposed for State street, the Commonwealth agreeing to bear the additional burden in order to bring the bridge into full conformity with the great new park to be constructed on the ground taken over by the extension purchases. Every argument is in favor of the new State street structure and no time should be lost in getting the plans prepared in order that the work can be started as soon as the Legislature provides the money next year.

Manifestly, the Germans fear the crash that is impending in Austria. Having forced an unwilling ally to uphold sacrifices on the Italian front, the German murderers must now realize that another long step has been taken toward their own finish.

GOOD ADVICE

GOVERNOR LOWDEN, of Illinois, who in a public statement expresses his disappointment over the acquittal of the men who lynched Prager, an alleged German sympathizer, at the same time calls upon the Federal authorities to see to it that all disloyal utterances or actions are properly punished by due process of law. Governor Lowden takes a wise view. Had the United States authorities been as vigorous in their action against pro-Germanism as many people believe they should have been the Prager incident most likely never would have occurred.

The Lowden statement is just as applicable to Pennsylvania as to Illinois. He says: "The Federal officials within the State must see to it that every charge of disloyalty or sedition be promptly investigated and that the guilty be vigorously and severely punished."

The local officials must see to it, not after the event, as in the Prager case, but before, that mobs be dispersed and punished before they have a chance to wreak their vengeance.

If juries will not convict in cases like this, the local authorities must prevent them from occurring. If in any community they fail in the duty of maintaining the law, nothing remains but to declare martial law in such community.

Democracy is on trial. Every activity of a mob is an assault upon the very principle of democracy. Every man who joins the mob is answerable morally and legally for everything the mob does. A true patriot in this crisis is he who not only helps his country to win battles abroad, but who helps his country to preserve order at home.

dict summary punishment upon those whose offenses are overlooked by those whose duty it is to suppress crime.

At the Island nursery of the city there are many trees and plants which should be transplanted to the park areas. During the last year unusual storms have destroyed many trees, and while these should be replaced they are not available in the quantities which require attention. Don't let us neglect Harrisburg on the score of "war necessity." When the boys come back they are going to find out how we have been keeping the home fires burning during their absence, and will not be satisfied with paltry excuses.

Politics in Pennsylvania

By the Ex-Committeeman

Keystone State Democrats have staged many interesting events in the last decade, but it is doubtful if there has been any other open space which requires attention. Don't let us neglect Harrisburg on the score of "war necessity." When the boys come back they are going to find out how we have been keeping the home fires burning during their absence, and will not be satisfied with paltry excuses.

Among Democrats gathered here there seems to be general approval of the appointment of Edward J. Fox, the Easton lawyer, as Supreme Court justice, and there are signs that all Democratic factions may unite in his support. When Governor Brumbaugh, at suggestion of Attorney General Brown, selected him he asked Palmer and McCormick about him and also the Congressmen from that section—Messrs. Dewalt and Steele. All spoke in the highest terms.

John F. Short, the Clearfield editor, is here with the Palmer-McCormick entourage. His son, Frank Short, is writing the political news for the Philadelphia Record, which has the Bonnell end. Their discussions have been very interesting and up to date. Walter J. Christy, of the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, has dodged being umpire.

REPUBLICANS UNITED

[From the Scranton Republican.] The Republican state committee of Pennsylvania has organized for a great victory in November. It will be a victory for the party, and not for any particular clique or faction, and will, therefore, be hailed with enthusiasm by the rank and file who take all the greater pleasure in supporting the organization, its candidates and its principles when they are backed by the united strength of all its elements co-operating for success.

At the meeting of the state committee in Philadelphia men who have been at odds for some time took leave of party differences and under the party banner, clasped hands for harmony and victory. J. Denny O'Neil, who was a candidate for governor at the primaries, pledged cordial support to his successful opponent, State Senator William C. Sprout, whose election will be marked by a majority of 500,000 votes.

United States Senator Penrose buried the hatchet with the Vire brothers of Philadelphia, and took a strong stand for party unity and aggressiveness. He held that party solidarity is as essential during the war as it is in times of peace, and that these are the things which the Republican party must help to do, namely, to win the war and win it now; to achieve peace by victory and not by compromise, and to make preparations for the solution of the immeasurable problems which will arise after the war.

Chairman Hays, of the National Republican committee, made a strong argument for party harmony. He asserted that "there are no yesterday's in the party," so far as disensions are concerned, and that no matter how long it has been two, or six years ago, all are Republicans now and all are for party success and the greater glory of the nation.

State Senator Sprout, the Republican candidate for governor, strongly urged patriotic co-operation with the national government to win the war. Pennsylvania would do her duty, he said, and acquiesce in the President's declaration that "politics is adjourned" so far as the war is concerned, have the party in this great Republican state, while devoting its strength to national aims, would keep up its organization, conscious of its ability for all the greater service because of its strength. Other speeches were made predicting the election of Sprout and Beideman and the entire Republican ticket by a great majority.

All the addresses were permeated by a strong spirit of American patriotism and voiced the conviction that when the party is united and harmonious it is all the better able to render efficient aid to the national government in the successful prosecution of the war. The president of the state committee re-elected its former officers, including State Senator William E. Crow, of Fayette, as chairman, and referred the adoption of a platform to a special committee which will meet later. As chairman, Senator Crow, who enjoys a statewide acquaintance, add a thorough knowledge of political conditions in every one of the sixty-seven counties, will wage a winning campaign.

The enthusiastic meeting of the state committee and the harmonious spirit by which it was pervaded augur well for the renewal of the splendid prestige enjoyed by the Republican party of the Keystone State in its palmy days.

Evening Chat

The Pennsylvania organization of the Improved Order of Red Men, which has decided to once more honor Harrisburg as its State Council city is not only one of the most influential but one of the strongest numerically in this vicinity. The convention to be held here next June, in accordance with the decision of the great council sitting at Scranton, will be the third in fourteen years. The last time the council fire was kindled here was in 1909 and in 1904 a notable gathering was held in this city. Both occasions were marked by the usual picturesque parades. There are no less than seven tribes of the order in Harrisburg and with the auxiliaries and side degrees they comprise about 3,500 persons. In the county outside of the city there are tribes in Williamstown, Millersburg, Wiconaco, Highspire, Middletown and Steelton, there being two in the latter place. On the West Shore there are tribes in New Cumberland and West Fairview, many Enola men being affiliated with the latter organization. Thus it will be seen that there are sixteen branches in what are called the Harrisburg district and many prominent men are members. The Red Men, who are noted for the way they stick together and the practical manner in which they give aid to widows and orphans, have not only gatherings which attract much attention because of the parades and the bright uniforms, but they have a substantial character of the men who make up the membership. The investments of the tribes are said to be very heavy in this section.

Some of the men who run lunch rooms in Harrisburg are inclined to despair over the appetites of the soldiers who threaten to bring them into violent collision with the federal food administration and they are wondering whether it would be worse to turn down the soldiers for buck Administration. The trouble seems to be that the soldiers have awful appetites. They work hard and they have big hungers and in short order and with the coming of the summer they are bringing them into violent collision with the federal food administration and they are wondering whether it would be worse to turn down the soldiers for buck Administration.
