

CHILD LEADS IN LA MARSELLAISE

Youngster Sways Audience in Honor of Madame Sarah Bernhardt

Spokane—Standing on the top of the piano in a theater in this city the other night, little Alice Holcomb, 6 years old, led the orchestra in "La Marseillaise" in honor of Madame Sarah Bernhardt who was making her first appearance here in the war sketch, "Champs d'Honneur."

Grasping her fiddle bow tightly in her small fingers, Baby Alice looked out over the heads of the orchestra, out over the heads of one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Spokane, smiled a little tremulously at mother and daddy, who sat in the front row, and then, although she admitted afterwards she was "awful scared," she drew her bow smoothly across the strings in the first notes of the stirring French hymn.

Spokane declared Madame Bernhardt the picture of health and vigor, in spite of her 73 years, looking and talking the part of youth. She had much praise for the baby violinist, with whom she said she was obliged to share the honors of the evening.
