

WILSON PLAYS POLITICS SAYS CHAIRMAN HAYS

Republican National Chairman Severely Criticizes President in New York

New York.—President Wilson and other members of the Democratic party were criticized by Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican National Committee, for playing politics while saying that "politics was adjourned." It was in the monthly meeting of the Republican county committee, where Mr. Hays was enthusiastically received. Previously he had dined with the members of the executive committee at the Republican Club.

The county committee revised its rules so as to give women a full participation in the organization hereafter.

"Our Democratic friends say that 'politics is adjourned,' Mr. Hays. 'At the same time they have been busy in every way possible in playing politics. Look at Wisconsin President Wilson by letter demanded the election of Finley Gray in a Wisconsin Congressional district. Yet the records show that Finley Gray voted for the McLemore resolution.'

"In the recent Lenroot campaign the Vice-President of the United States went to Wisconsin and made partisan speeches. The power of the Democratic Administration was brought to bear against Lenroot and in the face of all the odds that could be piled up against him he was triumphantly elected by a plurality of 15,000."

"Every one knows there will be political activity," added Mr. Hays. "The Democratic party has been busy with its political activity for months, but I insist that all this political activity should be open, acknowledged and of a character and on a plan that needs no subterfuge."

"The province of a political committee is to elect candidates, not select them. The duty of the party's membership—always, and this year above all other times, is to look to the quality of our candidates. These men will be trusted with the solution of problems of war and of reconstruction absolutely immeasurable in their magnitude and complexity; and they must be worthy."

"First of all our candidates must be men who are supremely pro-American, men who will give our all the most vigorous prosecution of the war, and who will strive irrevocably for a peace with victory and never a peace by compromise bargaining of principles."

"Next our candidates must be men of the highest ideals, with vision of the country's mission, with the highest sense of justice for all men, and with a knowledge of affairs and with experience commensurate with their responsibilities. We are as unprepared for peace as we were for war. And our candidates must be forward stepping as well as forward looking men."

Again, recalling the Presidential declaration of "Politics is adjourned," the speaker said: "What we want in this country is not 'less politics,' but more attention to politics. I have no use for the man who is either too busy or too good to take a part in the actual politics of his community. I have no use for those smug individuals who sit with their hands folded and expect governmental things to be right when they do nothing whatever in the bearing of burdens in any effort to help make them so."

"If we want better candidates, and consequently better government we can have them, but never if we are 'not interested' in politics. Abraham Lincoln was reasonably well thought of, and from the date of his majority until his death he was never 'too busy' or 'too good' to take a part in politics. Let us get more men and women of character, earnestly interested in politics, and the consequent good government is certain."

Man With Axe Put An End To Life of a Bear; First Wounded by Shot

Harper's Ferry — A bear story comes from the Briary Branch neighborhood of Virginia.

At Tuma and Long's camp several citizens discovered the carcass of a calf, which had presumably been killed by a bear. Robert Long, a member of the camping party, decided he would lay for the animal. His decision was hardly made when he spied the beast and, though a little shaky at the knees, he fired away, wounding, but not killing the bear which started down the mountain. Long gave him another shot. Again he failed to kill.

Probably thinking some help would be a good asset, Long summoned companions and the trusty dogs. Thoroughly armed with guns and an ax the men set out in search of the wounded bear. Soon they discovered him. Three men were now in the party, J. Robert Long, Samuel Heltzel and Tuma. There was the bear. It is said that Long and Heltzel sidestepped from the fray and shouted to Tuma to hit the bear with the ax. Long was behind a tree and Heltzel behind a bush. The bear suddenly appeared. The guns ceased to work and it was up to Tuma to use the ax, which he did, striking the bear over the head, putting an end to him.

The animal weighed four hundred and fifty pounds. Long took the hide and distributed the meat among his comrades.

Sues to Prevent His Sons Being "Sissies"

New York.—W. Christian Bergh, a banker and nephew of Henry Bergh, founder of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, does not intend that his three sons shall be "sissies."

To prevent their tendency in that direction, as he described it, owing to the influence their mother exerted to have them play with dolls and Teddy bears, he applied to Supreme Court Justice Green for their sole custody. It was granted.

Bergh and his wife, Ella S. W. Bergh, have been legally separated about three years. Bergh told the court that even after his sons, Henry Bergh, 3rd, Alfred Polk Bergh and Roland Bergh, had been sent to a boys' school, "disquieting letters and telegrams" informed him of a continuance of their mother's "feminizing influence." He displayed a telegram from Alfred to him, declaring the sender would not go to a boys camp, as his father had arranged; would not sleep in a tent, or bathe in cold water, or sleep on a hard bed, but wanted a bed with springs.
