INDIAN SCHOOL HEAD IN ARMY

John Francis, Jr., Superintendent at Carlisle, Made Lieutenant of Infantry

LIEUT. JOHN FRANCIS, JR.

Carlisle, Pa., July 3.—Furloughed from the Indian Department at his own request, John Francis, Jr., for over a year superintendent of the Carlisle Indian School, left last evening for Fort Niagara, N. Y.

Lieutenant Francis has had an application with the War Department for some time and was recently commissioned, being retained in the Indian Department service until the close of the school year on July 1. He was universally popular at the school and teachers and pupils regret his leaving.

Lieutenant Francis came here from Washington to head the school, succeeding O. H. Lipps. He has had much experience in Indian service work and was also trained prior to entering this field of activity in military affairs.
