11 VICTIMS OF U-BOAT OUTRAGE RESCUED AT SEA

Augvald Crew Had Been Eight Days Helpless in Small Boat

An Atlantic Port, July 9.—Rescued when almost dead from hunger and exposure after being adrift at sea for eleven days in a small boat, eleven survivors of the Norwegian steamship Augvald, the latest known victim of the Hun submarine pirates, arrived here yesterday on a trans-Atlantic liner which had picked them up in midocean on Independence Day.

Three days after leaving the side of the Augvald the small boat overturned and three of the original fourteen were drowned. Another small lifeboat in which Captain Egge and twelve other members of the Augvald's crew escaped is missing and it is believed that the men have been lost.

Fifteen minutes were allowed the crew of twenty-seven men to take to the lifeboats. As soon as they had cleared the ship's side the Germans hung bombs at the ends of ropes and swung them over the sides of the Augvald. To these time fuses were attached. The Germans then left the ship and the survivors pulled away a terrific explosion occurred and in a few minutes the Augvald went down.

Storm Separates Lifeboats For two days the lifeboats kept together, when they were separated by a storm. What became of the captain's boat and the thirteen men none of the survivors know. The boat containing the survivors was in charge of the chief engineer.

Eight days of torture and sufferings followed. Every particle of food and water had been used. Not an ounce of a life belt was left. Finally a vessel's smoke was seen. The men watched it as only castaways can watch such a vision, and when spars and funnel came in sight and it was seen that the vessel was heading for the lifeboat they stood up in the boat and waved their souls' westers.

But, apparently, those on board the steamship failed to see the shipwrecked mariners and passed on their way. For the next six days the men were kept alive by eating seaweed and drinking water caught in their caps when it rained.

Aid Comes at Last According to an officer on the rescuing vessel, the lookout on the rescuing ship on the morning of Independence Day sighted off to the west what appeared at first to be a log. The course of the vessel was changed, and the object gradually took on the shape of a small lifeboat. A closer view showed the eleven men huddled in the bottom. Two or three of them lifted their heads feebly and attempted to stand up, but they fell back into the bottom of the boat. A lifeboat from the liner was then lowered and all hands were brought on deck.

The men had almost abandoned hope of ever seeing land again, when the liner came into sight.

The Augvald, formerly the steamship Alana, was built in Sunderland, England, in 1918. The vessel registered 3,406 tons gross, 2,098 tons net and was 340 feet long, 45 feet beam and 15.3 feet depth to hold. The owner was A. K. Augvald, of Hagesand, Norway.

BARBERRY PERIL OF STATE WHEAT

Western States' Experience Shows That It Is Breeding Place For the Rust

A crusade against the common or purple barberry as a breeder of rust and one of the most dangerous neighbors of wheat may be undertaken in Pennsylvania this summer, observations as to the extent of the rust afflicting the grain being now in progress. Attention of the State Agricultural, Game and other authorities was directed to the menace of the barberry by men in western states recently and a series of tests was started here.

The barberry is extensively used in Pennsylvania and adjoining states as an ornamental plant and in western states it was discovered that it was responsible for development of the pest known as the black stem rust, which crosses from the barberry to the wheat fields and also has an affinity for some fifty varieties of grass. Many thousands of bushels have been lost through rust in this state.

State authorities have arranged with nurserymen to stop the sale of common barberry and are recommending its removal. Warnings that the Hessian fly, another wheat pest, is showing signs of activity have also been given.

LONG BATTLE ON "DRY" BILL

FACES SENATE Substitute For Norris Rider Is Hurriedly Introduced by Senate Committee

Washington, July 9.—A new "bone-dry" prohibition measure, prohibiting the manufacture of beer and wines after November 1, and the withdrawal from bond or sale, except for export, of whiskey and other distilled liquors after December 31 of this year, was substituted for the Norris rider to the food-production bill by the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday.

The action of the committee was taken at a meeting held hurriedly in the morning, when it appeared that the food-production bill, which is now before the Senate, faced defeat.

The Norris amendment would have eliminated beer within three months, while it permitted the sale of whiskey for a year. Much of the opposition to the "bone-dry" rider was based upon the terms of the rider, which gave such a long lease of life to whiskey, while it shut off beer almost immediately.

The substitute amendment was reported to the Senate as follows: "That after December 31, 1918, until the conclusion of the present war, for the purpose of conserving the manpower of the nation and to increase efficiency in the production of arms, war munitions, ships, food and clothing for the Army and Navy, it shall be unlawful to sell for beverage purposes any distilled spirits, and during said time no distilled spirits held in bond shall be removed therefrom for beverage purposes except for export. After November 1, 1918, until the conclusion of the present war, no grain, cereal, fruit or other food product shall be used in the manufacture or production of beer, wine or other intoxicating malt or vinous liquor for beverage purposes.

After December 31, 1918, and until the conclusion of the present war no beer, wine or other intoxicating malt or vinous liquor shall be sold for beverage purposes except for export. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is hereby authorized and directed to prescribe rules and regulations, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, in regard to the removal of distilled spirits held in bond, after December 31, 1918, for other than beverage purposes, also in regard to the distribution of wine for sacramental, medicinal or other non-beverage uses. After the approval of this act no distilled, malt, vinous or other intoxicating liquors shall be imported into the United States.

"Any person who violates any of the foregoing provisions shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year or both."

The prohibition battle in the Senate will probably be long drawn out, as a filibuster would soon have against the food-production bill by the wets. The substitution of the new amendment for the Norris rider, however, has gained votes for the drys, the Prohibitionists claim, and an early vote may be forced.

STATE POLICE PROTECTION New Cumberland, Pa., July 9.—Burgess Butt, in a statement to-day, informed the residents of New Cumberland that they would soon have protection of the State Police.
