The Plotters

A New Serial of East and West By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER X Elizabeth Wade's fright had banished her anger, and she forced a smile. "I spoke more sharply, perhaps, than I should have done," she said. "It is Mrs. Chapin to whom you should apologize—not to me."

"I have apologized to Mrs. Chapin," Butler told her. "She forgave me, like the good creature she is. Why, Miss Moore, what is the matter? You are all out of breath."

"Well—Taluk's dog was there," she admitted, "and I am afraid of him." "He is an ugly brute," the man declared. "Come and sit down on the veranda."

She walked up the path to the house with him, then sank down in a great rocker. "This day has been awfully hot!" she sighed. "And to-night is not much better. Where are Mr.—where are Cousin Amos and Cousin Martha?"

"Mr. Chapin went down the road to see a neighbor—and Mrs. Chapin said she had some sour milk to fix for pot-chesse, or something of that sort." "I see," the girl said. "Perhaps I would better go in and help her."

"No—don't!" Butler urged. "Stay here and talk to me instead." Elizabeth smiled teasingly. "I am afraid I might remind you of some fussy woman," she suggested.

"Ah, Miss Moore!" John Butler protested. "That is not kind! I told you I was sorry for my shocking speech. If you knew what I have been through, you would not wonder that I get cross sometimes."

Elizabeth waited in silence. She hoped, yet feared, that this man would tell her of his long illness and of his meeting with her brother. She wondered if she could appear as casually interested and as ignorant as her role demanded.

"A Reconciliation At last Butler spoke. "I have been so much absorbed in affairs on the farm since I came that I have not let myself think of the past year. But when your cousin said what she did to-night, I remembered it all, and I felt sick as I thought of it. That was why I spoke so hastily. Then when I saw the look that came to your face I appreciated how rude I had been.

"Never mind that now," the girl said. "I acknowledge that some women are fussy creatures."

"Well," she remarked easily, "I hope you find the place worth saving from the ruin that Dr. Wade seemed to fear."

"Indeed I do," her companion declared. "If I only could get Chapin to see what might be done. But he has a notion—"

"Well," Elizabeth leaned forward in unfeigned interest. "I—beg your pardon again!" Butler exclaimed. "For the moment I forgot that Mr. Chapin is your cousin."

"Oh—he—I mean the relationship is not on that side of the family," the girl assured him. "I will mean that Mr. Chapin has some old-fashioned notions about working the place. From what he let slip the other day, I fancy he thinks of buying off Wade's interest. In that case, of course, he would not care to have the farm made any more valuable just yet. It would be poor business."

A dark figure stole around the corner of the veranda, and stood in the shadows watching the pair intently. Close to the figure crouched a black dog.

Expect 15,000 Men Made in Few Weeks

Camp Meade, Md., July 10. — In the neighborhood of 15,000 young men have been ordered to report for training at this cantonment within the coming few weeks. Many of these are negroes. Soon after their arrival several new negro regiments will be organized as a part of a new division of negroes to be created by white men will go into the One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Depot Brigade, and may also form the nucleus of a new division to be created here.

Walter Carter and Frank Carter, brothers, narrowly escaped being burned to death yesterday afternoon, when an autotruck in which they were riding was destroyed by fire. It was struck by a car of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Railway at the Midway station, in the heart of the cantonment.

Announcement was made yesterday of the assignment of Colonel Harry F. Wilbur to command the Three Hundred and Twelfth Artillery, succeeding Colonel James F. Brady, who has been transferred to the Coast Artillery Corps. Colonel Wilbur was commissioned a lieutenant in the Regular Army from Pennsylvania in 1888.

Colonel Otto B. Rosenbaum, of the Three Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry, also a Pennsylvania unit, will not go across with his command. He has recently been promoted to be a brigadier general. He is now awaiting confirmation by the Senate and assignment to some brigade. Colonel John K. Herr has been assigned to command the Three Hundred and Fifteenth.

How to Conserve

Canning and Packing For Winter's Use Explained in Detail by National War Garden Expert

CANNING FRUIT JUICES

The preparation of quantities of fruit jellies in these days is neither helpful toward food conservation or economical. Sugar is expensive, but even if we can buy it without inconvenience, it is one of the things needed for shipment to our allies. The alternative offered instead of jelly making is to can fruit juices. Juices from grapes, currants, cherries, blackberries, raspberries, strawberries, plums and apples makes delicious beverages. These may be put up with a small quantity of sugar or with none. Write to the National War Garden Commission, Washington, for a free canning manual, which will be sent you upon request. A 2-cent stamp to cover postage should be enclosed.

Sound, clean fruit should be heated until soft (over hot water, a doubling device is safest). Strain through a bag, squeezing the bag, or use a fruit press. Inexpensive ones for household use may be obtained and they are a great convenience.

Four the hot juice at once into sterilized bottles—one level cupful of sugar into each gallon of juice may be first added if desired. Fill the bottles to within one inch of the top and seal loosely with new corks; soaked one-half hour in warm soda water (one teaspoonful soda to a quart of water), and dipped into clear boiling water just before using.

Place in simmering hot water bath and pasteurize in this for 30 minutes. The water should come to within an inch of tops of bottles. Remove and press corks in tight. With a sharp knife cut off each cork even with the top, placing the neck of bottle on edge of table.

When cool dip each top of bottle into melted paraffin or sealing wax. Equal parts resin and beeswax melted together make good wax. Melt over hot water. Store in a cool, dark place. The commission will gladly answer any questions written on one side of the paper and sent in a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Copenhagen, July 10.—Emperor William has consented to the resignation of Dr. Richard von Kuehlmann, German foreign secretary, the Wolff News Bureau, of Berlin, says it is reliably reported.

COLD PACK METHOD IN 12 SHORT STEPS

No. 1

The first step in canning by the single period cold pack method, after washing and grading, is paring and coring with a sharp knife, says the National War Garden Commission, Washington, D. C., which will send the readers of this paper a free canning book for a two-cent stamp to pay postage. Watch for No. 2.

COLD PACK METHOD IN 12 SHORT STEPS

No. 2

After paring and coring, all vegetables and some fruits should be blanched by plunging them into boiling water for a short time. This picture shows blanching with a wire basket, as suggested by the National War Garden Commission, at Washington, which will send readers of this paper a free canning book for a two-cent stamp to pay postage. Watch for No. 3.
