

NO TRACE FOUND OF MISSING TRIO

Disappearance of Pittsburgh
Girl and Two Relatives
Is Deep Mystery

Phillipsburg, Pa.—Members of the State Police force searching this section of the country during the past week in an effort to secure some clue as to the mysterious disappearance of Charles Osterhaut and his daughter, of Bald Eagle Valley, and his niece, Miss Agnes Campbell, 22 years old, of Pittsburgh, have not secured the slightest inkling as to their whereabouts. The niece is said to have been sent to this mountainous section on account of her health.

Osterhaut lived back in the country, and while he and the two girls disappeared June 18, nothing was known of it until the State Police were started on the job last week. On the date mentioned Charles Osterhaut, accompanied by Miss Campbell and his daughter, went to Port Matilda, where Mr. Osterhaut received a registered letter containing $500 which had been sent him by his mother, who lives in Pittsburgh, for the purpose of paying off a mortgage on his farm. The three persons were in an automobile, and Mr. Osterhaut, after receiving the money at Port Matilda, had started for home. It has been learned that while on the way home he stopped at a farmhouse and purchased fifty bushels of oats, six bushels of which he loaded into the automobile.

They then started home. Since that time nothing has been seen of the automobile or its occupants. On Wednesday Osterhaut's two brothers-in-law, named Collins and Campbell, of Pittsburgh, arrived here and they have not been able to find any clue concerning the missing party.

While part of the road over which the automobile traveled is mountainous and has several dangerous places in it, no evidence can be found where the machine flashed down the mountainside.

New Revenue Bill May Tax All Sales

Washington.—Hearings before the House Committee on Ways and Means have now been in progress for nearly a month. They have proceeded far enough to demonstrate the fact that in the early stages of the consideration of the measure there has been maintained a complete harmony in the relations between the Democratic and Republican members of the committee, and the outlook for a safer and wiser suggestion of legislation than was put forth by the same committee a year ago is far better than ever before. Thus far, however, there has been no attempt made to ascertain a consensus of opinion among the committee members on any detail of the proposed bill. Numerous suggestions for increasing present taxation and of new sources of revenue have been made, most of which have some supporters in the committee, but, until the hearings come to a close, about the middle of the month, and the committee begins to take stock of the impressions made, it will be impossible to outline with any certainty the provisions of the new bill.

It can be set down that President Wilson's recommendation for an increase in income and excess-profits taxes and for a tax on luxuries will be acted upon favorably by the House committee. These are the most obvious features of existing law upon which to increase rates of taxation, and the committee has been giving special attention, both in its public and private investigations, to excess-profits, particularly those accumulated from war work. There is a decided feeling among the committee members of both parties that neither the income tax nor excess-profits tax next year will produce as much revenue as was produced this year unless the present rate is largely increased. The natural falling off in ordinary production, due to the war, and the fact that the Government itself is watching war contracts as never before, is certain to produce this result, in the opinion of the committee.

Plan to Keep Huns Forever From Pacific

Washington.—Senator Saulsbury of Delaware, president protem of the Senate and a close student of Eastern affairs has introduced a resolution for concerted action by the United States, Great Britain and Japan to keep Germany out of the Pacific Ocean. Senator Saulsbury expects to seek general discussion of his resolution by the Senate at the first opportunity.

"I want to keep those modern pirates from infesting the Pacific as they have other waters," said Senator Saulsbury in explaining the purpose of the measure. "I want to see the United States and Allied nations do something concrete and definite now towards preventing the spread of the fiendish doctrines of kultur to portions of the globe not yet badly infected. I am in favor of a league to enforce peace, but that, in the nature of things, is something that must wait awhile, until we have conquered. But here is something we can do now right along that line. The combined strength of the United States, Great Britain and Japan could keep Germany out of the Pacific forever."

"Russia, too, should be allowed a part in this union when she is able to play it. We must show our faith in Russia's ability and intention to come back and resume her seat in the circle of free and enlightened nations. China also, I believe, ought to receive encouragement along that line."
