TRAP, GUN and ROD

The Lord giveth and the Lord, taketh away! When the territory of Minnesota was created, the antecedating Pierre Radisson's visit in 1659 by many centuries, that region was spot lighted by the Great Spirit, who favored it as a natural game preserve, making it especially seductive to the feather axes of the air and monarchs of the woods, placing automatic easy access. The lakes were covered with wild rice, celery in quantity could be located by the deep sea divers. The Noble Red Man, quick to locate and prey upon the white man's game, called this section home and were loath to relinquish their inherent right of the land.

The tribal tepees were pitched near the shore and the season was an uninterupted succession of gala days for the Indians. Gambling in every form then known to those crafty warriors, was scheduled day and night. Tests of skill and athletic speed or endurance, upon which wagers were placed, was at all times in vogue.

The Union Station team going it! Won eleven battles without a defeat. The last victim to get in the way of the Union Station Limited was the New Cumberland A. C. last evening 6-4, the teams playing over there. Captain E. B. Snyder had his men on the job from the moment the umpire called play.

Macon, Ga.—There was Shelley, the Irish Count, as he styled himself, who would come occasionally for a month or so from a round-the-world trip, making the circuit without a dollar and all his baggage crammed in his vest pocket, if he had a vest; if not it didn't matter.

The Count was rated as one of the swiftest printers, and where some made $5 the day he could easily make $8 or $10. But a day's work was a gracious plenty at a time. In the days when the late Col. W. A. Huff was Mayor and presided over the police court, the police had orders to let the Count alone unless he got to fighting, but, unlike old Limerick, he was not a fighter. On the other hand, the drunker he got the jollier he became. And yet he had his sober moments, even when drunk.

It was his habit to sleep all day, for night was his time to work and to play. Generally he would pile himself in some out-of-the-way corner of an office or under the stairway or in the cellar and sleep. He loved the hours of midnight or the small hours of the morning. Sometimes seeing a number of men on the street together he would mount a drygoods box or barrow and re-situate the "Raven" or other poem.
