

Reading for Women and all the Family

Little Talks by Beatrice Fairfax

I have been thinking about an out-of-the-ordinary letter that a young woman wrote me the other day. She wrote from the city where she has successfully supported herself for a number of years, and she remarked, in a very direct, clear-eyed way:

"I wonder if you have found out anything that has surprised you about the sophistication necessary to guide a young woman through the village opportunities for sin as compared to the city, also about the really clever and studied efforts of the village Don Juan as compared to the city man?"

And she speaks of the earlier life in a busy office in the small town where she was born as "the best training possible for enabling a girl to resist temptation."

There is honesty and good sense in this letter and there is character, too; for the writer thinks of her own difficult experiences as so many seasons in self-protection, she feels that she has been exposed to all the dangers that threaten reckless, impetuous girlhood, but that she is wiser and safer for knowing about them. She has gotten a kind of immunity.

Knowledge the Best Shield

Doubtless there wouldn't be any boy-and-girl tragedy if every young girl were as self-controlled and sane as my correspondent is. And of course she is right in maintaining that knowledge is a far better shield than ignorance.

But what I wish to emphasize is the distinction that she draws between village and city life.

It is too often taken for granted that a girl who comes to earn her living in the city is immediately beset with every form of luring temptation.

Her innocent acquaintances "back home" think of her as plucked in the center of an undulating carnival, distinctly flame-colored, and they scarcely think it possible that she can escape without becoming just the least bit scorched.

Whereas the truth probably is that the only people she sees are in the subway and at her office. That she comes home overtired and is glad to go to bed at 9 o'clock. That she is lonely, dull and bored. And that if anybody from home—somebody who knew all the news and spoke her language and understood her allusions—would look her up some evening, she would like it better than anything in the world.

Life in a city can be just as humdrum as life in a small place, and it can be a good deal more lonely. It is quite possible, as many girls know, to live for a long time in a city without knowing any young man in a social way.

And if a girl is very careful about her acquaintances and if she has, besides, as much backbone as the young correspondent I have already quoted, I don't think the young people who are idling about the home village need worry about her.

It must be remembered that if the working girl who has gone to the city is busy, she has stayed at home, the young men

PUNY, WEAK BOY

Made Strong and Well by Vinol—Why It Is Best For Children

Williamson, W. Va.—"My little boy was weak, puny and tired all the time, did not want to do anything. Vinol was recommended and it has built up his strength and made him healthy."—Harley Clay, Williamson, W. Va.

The reason Vinol was so successful in this case is because it contains iron and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones, and glycerophosphates, etc. Elements needed to build up a weakened, run-down system, make rich blood and create strength.

A Clean Cool Scalp.

Parisian Sage Stops Itching, Keeps the Scalp Cool—Prevents Dandruff

Almost everybody nowadays knows that Parisian Sage, the invigorating hair restorer, is guaranteed to remove every trace of dandruff, itching, falling hair and itching scalp, or the cost, small as it is, will be refunded.

But you should know more about this marvelous hair grower. You ought to know that it immediately destroys all odors that are bound to come from the excretions of the scalp, and in the minutes after an application, no matter how hot the weather, your head will feel cool and comfortable.

Everyone should have a bottle of Parisian Sage handy because it is such a pleasant and exhilarating hair treatment. Ladies use it because they know it is delicately perfumed, not greasy or greasy, and surely does make the hair beautiful, silky and abundant. Here's what a New York woman writes: "I have used Parisian Sage two weeks only, yet in that time my hair has wonderfully increased in beauty, thickness and luxuriance, but what surprised me most was the disappearance of all dandruff."

A large bottle of Parisian Sage can be obtained from Kennedy's Drug Store or at any good drug or toilet counter—it's not expensive.

Bringing Up Father

whom she will meet there are no less occupied.

That the busy youth, either interested in his job or occupied with the problem of making a living, isn't likely to be the one who will misuse the privilege of her acquaintance. Interested busy-ness is the most wholesome thing for young people and the best possible protection against all the sad things that follow in the trail of "temptations" yielded to.

But if it is a little absurd to think of city life as engaged in a daily combat with vice, it is also wide of the mark, as my wise young correspondent has pointed out, to take it for granted that village life is the equivalent of a nursery.

Village Life No Nursery

A village girl's life isn't a mere alternation of dusting the parlor and doing the Christian Endeavor Society. Unless she has very strongly the temperament of the recluse, she shares with that of boy and girl the temptations of the world. And there is usually a good deal.

Unchaperoned intimacy is, of course, the rule in the American village. In the case of whole-some, normal boys and girls there isn't a word to be said against the custom. But it is to be admitted, however free of less pleasant type of male—the unwholesome-minded idler who makes it his pastime to tempt young girls to present "temptation" to young girls.

Such a man or such a boy, or perhaps more than one, is practically sure to be found in any quiet, leisured community. Perhaps he can accomplish any greater harm than temporary unhappiness. Undoubtedly he cannot, if the girl has knowledge and good sense. But it is just as well to realize that he is a pretty unvarying feature of small town life.

And if we are generalizing about the dangers to which girls are exposed, it is better to face the fact that the girl who has never left her native village has nevertheless her own problems and difficulties, and that if she has cheerfully and sensibly surmounted them it is greatly to her credit.

LIFE'S PROBLEMS ARE DISCUSSED

By MRS. WILSON WOODROW

Everywhere you go these Summer days you see the soldier and his girl, and we observe them with a very different feeling than that with which we used to regard the Summer lovers of other years at the beaches and parks, or on ferryboats, trains or trolley cars.

Then it was with a sort of amused tolerance at the best that we used to survey them, but now it is with sympathy and a kindly interest.

Get the situation so far as the principal actors is concerned is not materially altered. They still cling to each other in fond embrace heedless of the passing multitude the world forgetting if not by the world entirely forgot.

Nor is the girl changed to any noticeable degree. She is still to all intents and purposes the same eternal "summer girl." The cut of her skirt may change and the style of her blouse and her hat and her hosiery; she may vary from season to season between pumps and ties, between suede and less pleasant type of male—the unwholesome-minded idler who makes it his pastime to tempt young girls to present "temptation" to young girls.

Such a man or such a boy, or perhaps more than one, is practically sure to be found in any quiet, leisured community. Perhaps he can accomplish any greater harm than temporary unhappiness. Undoubtedly he cannot, if the girl has knowledge and good sense. But it is just as well to realize that he is a pretty unvarying feature of small town life.

Advice to the Lovelorn

INVESTIGATE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am employed as telephone operator and I have been in my present position for two years. There is a young man, who I am given to understand is married, who has been persistent in his attentions to me, although I have repeatedly refused them. He has gone so far as to ask to call on me.

As I have no relative to whom I could turn, I would appreciate your valuable advice.

WORRIED.

If this young man is married, of course you do not want to start a flirtation with him. The thing I like is that he has asked you to call on your own home. If you have any faith in him, why don't you quietly tell him of the matter and let him and in a dignified and sensible way ask for the truth? Can you not investigate through the men in your office? Girls take great risks when they start up affairs with fellow employees of whom they know practically nothing and of whom they have heard unfavorable things. Your own suspicion would seem to be a sort of warning. Proceed slowly, and be very, very careful.

SHE COULD NOT STAND OR WORK

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health and Stopped Her Pains.

Portland, Ind.—"I had a displacement and suffered so badly from it that at times I could not be on my feet at all. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my housework, was nervous and could not sleep. I took treatments from a physician but they did not help me. My aunt recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the credit."—Mrs. Josephine Kimble, 935 West Race St., Portland, Ind.

Thousands of American women give this famous root and herb remedy the credit for health restored as did Mrs. Kimble. The result of its long experience is at your service.
