The Evening Mail Scheme
Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador to the United States, attended a conference here early in 1915 when six or seven persons discussed the purchase of the New York Evening Mail, in order to bring about publication of "unbiased and truthful news" of the European war in an English newspaper. Ludwig Nissen, former president of the National Jewelers' Association, described this conference in a statement to-day, explaining that he had interested himself temporarily in the proposal only "from the standpoint of pure Americanism in the application of the 'square deal.'"

The conference, which was held at the heave of Percival Kuhne, mem-

the personnel of camp will be as follows:

"Cols. Rhoads, Shank, Nead, Fisher, Mausteller, Gorgas, Barnes, H. P. Miller, Sollenberger, Hoerner, Dietrich, C. M. Froehlich, Schriver; Brevets, Edward Manser, Samuel S. Rutherford, Henry H. Baish, Rev. S. Edwin Rupp and Dr. A. S. Koser.

"There are a few more who may be with us for part of the time, namely, Cols. Ebersole, Wickersham, Hoover, Kinnard and Brevets Durr H. A. Bair and E. A. Miller.

"We expect to have just enough rain to keep the dust down and a temperature to suit all. Some job. If there is any further information desired write to the bureau of information at Box 523, Harrisburg until July 23, after that to Pine Grove Furnace, Pa., in care of Explorers." the application of the 'square deel.'"

The conference, which was held at the home of Percival Kuhne, member of the New York and Leipsig, Germany, banking house of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, had no definite result, according to Mr. Nissen. However, he was informed later by Dr. Edward A. Rumely, now under arrest on charges involving the alleged purchase of the Mail for the German government, that Rumely had acquired the newspaper with the financial backing of a "very influential and rich individual." This individual, Dr. Rumely later told Mr. Nissen, has since died.

Mr. Nissen admitted buying bonds of the Mail from Dr. Rumely and asserted that the very fact that the securities had been "peddled around" in small lots had been an indication to him that the government at Berlin "had nothing to do with the Mail."

Cables Bring Ray of Hope to Roosevelts;

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 18.—A ray of hope that Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt may not have fallen to his death in a combat with a squadron of German airplanes, was brought to Colonel Roosevelt and his wife last night in a cable message sent from Paris by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., in which she said the report was "absolutely unconfirmed" there. The former President felt, however, that there only is a slight possibility that his youngest son may still be alive.

He was born here November, 1897, at the family home when his father was Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the McKinley administration. He was unmarried. The boy was a born naturalist, with a special love for animal life. Many are the tales told of his early days in the White House, when he kept the family and attendants in a state of anxiety over his strange pets, which often escaped to wander through the grounds or around the house.

Birds, beasts, wild and domestic, even reptiles, were included in the miniature menagerie the child gathered from all parts of the country. When it was known the Colonel, so far from being disturbed by the boy's traits, encouraged first hand studies in natural history, friends and admirers in every part of the country contributed all sorts of strange pets to the White House collection.

strange pets to the White House collection.

One of the prime favorites of Quentin was a beautiful little pony which had been given to Archie, his older brother, by Secretary of the Interior Bliss.

Once, when Archie was ill, Quentin became possessed of the idea his brother's recovery depended on seeing the pony. Therefore, he managed to get the little animal into the private elevator in the White House and took him to his brother's bedroom on the upper floor.

A pet snake was one of the lad's favorite possessions and it was said he had more than once created paale in his school by producing this reptile.
