Serving Uncle Sam in the Navy does not always consist of nosing around European waters looking for submarines. A letter from John Longsdorf, former newspaper man of this city, but now in the naval service of Uncle Sam on the U. S. Bear in Alaskan waters, tells an experience of naval service in the ice-bound waters of Alaska as Interesting as any from "over there."

Since the early part of June Longsdorf's ship has been icebound in the Bering sea, about fifty miles from the Alaskan town of Nome, the Bering sea, about fifty miles from the Alaskan town of Nome, the sallors can tell when night comes only by the clock. THREE MISERABLE ROOMS HOUSE EIGHT ford alley. It consists of a kitchen about six feet by nine feet, with stairs ascending to a room above. These two dark holes house a man, his wife and six little children, of whom the baby is 5 months old. After giving some directions to the mother, I took the poor sick baby, who had been crying upstairs, and sat with her an hour in a narrow side alley in order to give the child a little air; but, O ye men and women of Harrisburg, what air!—air the foulest of the foul. Before my eyes in a backyard reeking with filth, I could see a deep hole filled with sagnant water around the hydrant, several garbage cans emitting disagreeable odors, an outhouse and filth galore. Stray cats crawled about among the unkempt children.

My office was to see that the poor, sick baby should get pure milk furnished by the milk station at Front and Boas streets. But how was I to accomplish my task with no icebox, no screens to keep off the germ-laden files and no facilities to ensure clean-liness and protection from disliness and protection from discase? Will not the piteous cry of the children reach the hearts of men?

I have called up by phone J. Horace McFarland and the Health Board. Please pardon my in-truding on your precious time.

Both parents are dead and efforts were made during the afternoon to locate some one who had known the bride-to-he long enough to comply with the it cense requirements for appointment of a guardian.

Crown Prince Uses Most of His Reserves to Stave Off Disaster

By Associated Press London, July 25 .- On the western front of the Soissons-Rheims salient the allied forces have advanced to an average depth of three miles on a twelve mile front during the past

The reports show that the German high command has thus far engaged sixty-four divisions in the battle, representative of groups of the German armies in Flanders to Alsace. Those sixty-four divisions are nearly a third of the available German army

German army.

The conclusion is drawn that the enemy is being hard put to it for reserves, although Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, on the northern front, still has plenty of reserve divisions.

Iront, still has plenty of reserve divisions.

In authoritative circles here the view is expressed that Germany has reached what might be called the downward curve in her manpower. This applies to Prince Rupprecht's army as well as to the rest of the German army, and it explains why Prince Rupprecht is not inclined to take the offensive.

This drop in German manpower is not a sudden occurrence. It has been known to the allied military authorities for some time. The infantry units have been weakened by the withdrawal of storm troops and by heavy losses.
