sure that they have the best possible regulative measures before submitting it to council for action. A good ordinance would work a vast change for the better; a poor and inadequate ordinance would be worse than none, for its enactment might easily block further consideration of the subject without materially improving the situation.

The officers may expect to hear objections. There will be property owners who will try to convince them that the regulations proposed are too stringent. As Dr. Raunick says, the immediate and vital need is for legal power in the hands of the Health Department to force careless landlords or dirty tenants to clean up their premises. Of course, we need new houses; need them badly, are the different localities.

It would be as impossible for the Red Cross to misuse the money it collects as it would be for the Warn Department itself to devote only "ten per cent." of its funds "for the relief and benefit" of the Army. All these stories of waste and extravagance in the management of the Red Cross are pro-German slanders designed to discourage loyal citizens in supporting a necessary war work.—From the Committee on Public Information.

Harrisburg on the truck trains are giving this section of the State a are giving this section of the State at the sine name in eastern towns and cities where they stop and the reason is they are being extended welcomes and the best that the land affords. Probably a thousand trucks have passed through Harrisburg the last month or so, virtually every one of them being on its way right to the dock to be loaded on transports for France. The truck companies are trained at camps and sent to the factories where they are given their vehicles and started on the way. Of late truck companies have been going into camp for the night at Camp Hill or near Hummelstown, but a number have taken to the circus grounds at Twenty-first and Derry streets, where they have bivouaced to the joy of the kids of the East End. These men have made themselves at home and have been given many an addition to their mess by the hospitable people of that section of the city, while the members of the Royal Fire Company have not only tendered them the use of bath rooms, but allowed their hose to wash down the trucks. However, it is of the farmers that the boys of the truck companies speak. They are strong for the farmers who have stood out on the roads as they went by and tossed them apples and is of the farmers that the boys of the truck companies speak. They are strong for the farmers who have stood out on the roads as they went by and tossed them apples and peaches and other things. Pennsylvania farmers are all right; I hope they make a lot of money. They're not stingy," said one rawboned western soldier as he told of the way the men had been given things to eat while coming through the Cumberland and Juniata valleys. The bulk of the truck trains come up from the Lincoln highway at Chambersburg or come down the William Penn by way of Lewistown and then move through Harrisburg by way of Reading and Easton to New York. They are keen about Harrisburg streets, but sore on the highways in some of its neighboring boroughs.

State Librarian Thomas Lynch Montgomery, David E. Tracy and John Armstrong Herman have been appointed the committee in charge of the "nineteenth" at the Country Club of Harrisburg. It should, be understood that each hole on the golf course of the new establishment of the club has a committee. Chairman "Sam" Todd, of the grounds committee, decided recently to name men to look after each hole. In this way he sidetracked some of the kicks and at the same time gave some of the observers and commentators on the condition of the course some thing to think about, and perchance, to defend. Fuel Administrator Ross A. Hickok, Manager Frank A. Robbins, Jr., of the Bethlehem Steel; Frank Payne, Walter H. Gaither, Dr. William E. Wright, Frank M. Eastman, "Bob" McCreath, John Hoffer, Jr., "Judge" Nauman, Food Administrator Donald McCormick and lots of others have greens to fuss with. However, when the committee on the "nineteenth" was named they promptly held a meeting and sent word that it was in had condition, very dry, and would require at least $500 to be put into proper shape for a successful autum season.

"Joe" LeCompte, the assistant cashier of the State Treasury, who has been running the finances of the State, does not look like a man who hands out millions. The other day the man from Bradford sat down and figured up a few things. When he got through he discovered that he had signed checks calling for about $2,000,000. "Well, I'm glad it was the State's money. I'd have trouble getting enough to meet that call myself," said he.

Building and loan associations of Pennsylvania are believed to hold

Building and loan associations of Pennsylvania are believed to hold nearly a million dollars' worth of liberty bonds, according to men at the State Capitol and they will be called upon to dispose of them under the opinion of the attorney general that such bonds are not a legal investment for such organization under the statutes of this State. Reports made by building and loan associations at the close of last year showed over half a million dollars' worth of such bonds owned and a number of organizations, notably in Philadelphia, are said to have invested funds in such securities since the first of the year. Associations will be notified of the attorney general's decision.

Sportsmen who write letters to people at the Capitol declare this year should furnish a good second test for the game code of 1917 and there have been few objections made to it. Some men in the northern part of the State are not disposed to speak kindly about arrangement of seasons owing to the difference between the climatic conditions of Potter, for instance, and the Bedford district, but the balance seems Potter, for instance, and the Bed-ford district, but the balance seems to be fair in the eyes of people here and the fact that the bird season is over before the deer hunters get
