

“Keep the Home Wheels Turning”

IT has been computed that it takes an average of eight workers to keep a soldier in the field. This includes the making of guns, shells and equipment; the maintaining of food supplies, transportation and performing of the hundred and one tasks that go to maintain at full efficiency the perfect army organization.

¶ This gives you some idea of the magnitude of our task and shows the important part labor must play in winning the war. Our men and women who work are in fact the great reserve army that backs up the fighting man in the trenches.

“Keep the Home Wheels Turning”

must be the watchword of every one of us

¶ They must not be merely kept turning, they must be speeded up and all the essential outputs be increased. To do all this we must work together and stay working where we are. To shift and jump about, here and there, is not advisable under present conditions. Unless our government actually requires your services you are serving the situation best by keeping steadily at work and not disturbing conditions by moving about thoughtlessly during these critical hours.
