

CAPT. NICODEMUS TELLS OF FRANCE

Tells of Hard Work at Headquarters of Keystone Division

Portions of three letters from Captain E. A. Nicodemus of the Quartermasters Corps, which follow, tell interestingly of his experiences in the war zone. Captain Nicodemus is disbursing officer of the 28th Division. He was a resident of Harrisburg and is well-known here as a physician and former officer of the Governor's Troop. In letters to his mother, Mrs. Rebecca Nicodemus, 2017 North Fifth street, he says:

Officers' Rest House, and Mess, June 29, 1918. I am in my room which faces the square or Place de Marche. Under normal conditions it is an assembly place for musical concerts and three times a week is the market. The farmers erecting a canvas roof over tables they bring with them. Now it is a repair shop for crippled lorries and autos. The place is full of machines, forges and work benches. Some of the tools are badly worn and some have been shelled.

This is only eight or nine miles back of the lines and we have plenty going on. The front is very quiet now as the other fellow is moving troops north against the British and south to assist the Austrians.

We are making a preparatory to a drive and I hope it will be a hard one, for they are the only ones that will count from now on.

I am staying here with 266 men and one officer until Tuesday. The men, clerks, guards, etc., will leave for the new headquarters and I will guard will stay for a large city, about 40 miles from here, for about $225,000 for pay and expect to join the outfit about 8 p. m. that evening.

If conditions are good I will work all night, going from place to place, paying them off. During the day, night we don't use one another continually, as the Boche has an ugly habit of dropping shells or bombs on it and it's hard on the roads and makes the repair gangs work over time. Thursday evening I was coming over a road that had been used all of Wednesday night and the greater part of Thursday by French troops when a shell dropped about 100 yards to the side. The driver of the car stopped and began digging around the bottom of the car. When I asked him what was the matter he was looking for his "tin hat." The hole the shell made was large enough to bury a horse.

We have been having ideal weather since coming down into this neighborhood but the blame heathen seem to think we don't need sleep, for every clear night we are crossed on their way to bombard Paris about 10.30 or 11 p. m., and then about 5 a. m. the trucks and troops wake you up.

Just had the police to come in and tell me that my light—a candle—showed from the outside and the curtains must be drawn.

July 6, 1918. Have had several trips across the Marne. The valley is fine—that is the lower valley. Up where we are there are more hills and the buildings are not as modern.

Spent a night about two weeks ago in a chateau—the modern end of which was built in 1568.

A German officer brought in the other night as a prisoner, when asked what the war was about, said, "England was fighting for the sea, France for her country, and the United States for souvenirs."

Some of our fellows here hit the trail, but they gave a good account of themselves before going. One lad slipped away from his squad, when they had to lay down on account of machine gun fire, crawled to the rear of the nest and blew up the whole crew with a bomb. Just as he was rolling into the hole where some of his squad were, a sniper got him through the back. He had time to say, "I'm only one, but I got eight first."

Night before last our artillery made things seem like the first and second lines and last evening over 170 planes went over and bombed the back areas.

Had just opened up after supper when a bundle of telegraphs ending with May 30, was thrown on the desk. All work stopped for an hour and a half.

July 12, 1918. Wednesday evening was mail day with a vengeance. Received eight letters, also bundle of telegraphs. Papers passed on to the crowd.

Since moving to our present location I have been grinding. We were a whole month late in getting started and only one-quarter of the help—have gradually added a man, until now have three-fourths of my complement.

This is some job. We never quit until 10.30 to 11.30 p. m. and have nothing but candles for light. Each man has two. Have a room to myself here with two windows toward the south. Boxes on end for cases, two desks and long carriage machine against one wall; two rows of tables with adding machine in middle of the one across the room and at the end of each row a typewriter. Sounds like a boiler shop at times when all machines are running and three or four men are reading "comrades."

Received notice last night that General Pershing would call today. He made us a visit May 30, while we were farther north.

Crowder Urges Youths of 21 to Be Certain to Register

Washington, Aug. 15.—Provost Marshal General Crowder issued a statement today, emphasizing that all male citizens who shall have reached their 21st birthday since June 5 last must appear before the local boards to register for military service on August 24, regardless of any presumed grounds for exemption. Opportunity to make claim for exemption will be afforded subsequently in the filing out of questionnaires by registrants.

"Provision will be made for the registration by mail of any person who expects to be absent on registration day from the jurisdiction of the board, where he permanently resides," says the statement.

"But in such a case extreme care should be taken by him to see that his registration card reaches his home board on or before August 24. Such persons are advised to apply at once to a local board for instructions as to how to proceed."

Gettysburg Prepares to Give Each of Its Students a Course in Military Training

Gettysburg, Aug. 16.—At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania College held here yesterday it was decided that the college will adopt the new Students Army Training Corps plan for military training for the duration of the war. This training will supersede the Reserve Officers Training Corps which has been established at the college for the past two years. The action of Pennsylvania college is in line with the more made in leading educational institutions of the country. The main features of this new plan for military training are:

Any able-bodied male student in college or entering college over eighteen years of age may enlist in the corps. He then becomes a member of the United States Army for the duration of the war. Regular uniforms, including hats, shoes and overcoats, will be furnished by the government. He will be on inactive duty during his college course with the exception of six weeks during vacation time when he will be required to attend a summer camp for intensive military training. His traveling expenses to and from camp will be paid and he will be on active duty under pay and subsistence by the War Department. On reaching the age of twenty-one he must register with his local draft board. He may remain in college until his call is reached under the Selective Service Law. At that time it will be decided whether he will be called immediately to active service or whether he shall remain in college to complete the course he is pursuing. The decision will depend upon the needs of the service and upon his progress in his military training and in his studies and determined by the military officers at the college and by the college authorities. After graduation he will be eligible for an officer's training camp. The relation of a student enlisted in the corps to the draft is as follows: Any student so enlisted, though in the military service of the United States, is technically on inactive duty, and therefore must register after he has reached draft age. Upon stating on his questionnaire that he is already in the military service of the United States he will be placed automatically in his local draft board in Class V-D, as provided by the Selective Service Regulations. The draft board will not call him for induction as long as he remains a member of the S. A. T. C. Students enlisted in the corps will not be limited in the choice of the branch of the service that they will ultimately enter (engineers, artillery, infantry, navy, etc.), to any greater extent than would have been the case had they not enlisted in the corps. In all cases their preferences will be considered except where urgent military needs require a different course. The War Department has given the following as some of the objects for which units of the Students' Army Training Corps are established in qualified colleges:

"To qualify, by systematic and standard methods of training, students at higher civil educational institutions for more effective service in the armed forces of the United States, to permit qualified students to complete their education in numbers sufficient to meet the special and technical needs of the service, and to provide a reservoir from which candidates for officers' training camps may be drawn.

"To give young men the moral and intellectual advantages of rigorous military discipline, and to develop in them robust health, hardihood and aggressive physical courage, thus enhancing the value of their academic training and their appreciation of the opportunities it affords.
