After the ceremonies he was noticed in a far corner with a huge stack of bills. Nuff said. (P. S. No. 3—"Andy" Patterson and Robert McCormick were with him.) One of the delightful innovations of the afternoon occurred when David Kaufman, David Tracy, George Reimold, Boyd Oglesby and a few other experts rigged up a table on the lawn and gave the admiring guests a fine demonstration of "now-you-see-it-and-now-you-don't," which in some respects resembles the old game of club-croquet, with variations. It is a highly instructive sport, with many possibilities for the skilled player and promises to become even more popular when sufficiently un-derstood.

"Charley" Boll bid so often and so successfully that they finally ruled him out of the auction. Captain Douglas set the pace by buying the first bond. This was real money and Chairman Heathcote took a satchel full of bills and siver back to the postoffice with him last night.

SUMMER BEVERAGES

Warm days increase the demand for cooling drinks and likewise the consumption of sugar. Substituted beverages are not used. Delicious beverages may be made with honey or syrups which do not contain sugar. To alleviate the sugar shortage the following suggestions are made: Use honey and syrup in beverages such as grape juice, lemonade and raspberry shrub. Fruit juices may be preserved without sugar. Serve syrups in pitchers, as cream is served in tea, to avoid waste of undissolved sugar in cups and tumblers. Acquire a taste for "less sweet drink."
