

EDDIE PLANK VERSUS JEFF TESREAU TOMORROW AT STEELTON; SYCAMORE CHAMPIONS

THE BLACK CATS GET SCRATCHED

Kiwans Treated the Stygian Felines Roughly and then Fed 'em at Elks Club

The Black Cats of Camp Colt, under management of Captain Omar Harris, the soldier-psychologist, who started baseball in the Orient, met the Black Demons, better known as Kiwans, yesterday afternoon, at the West End grounds, and after this one need fear a black cat. With aggressive collateral talent made up of renowned ball players from various colleges, the Black Cats clawed at Pitcher Hinkle, but could not draw blood. Hinkle proceeded leisurely as a man sliding coal into your cellar at each one of his shells were aimed surely. The Treat Em Roughers only nicked his delivery six times and most of them were scratchy; albeit Holmes rode one for three bases. Nine of his victims died by the strikeout route. Sterrick had a monopoly of hits for Kiwans, belting three times. A big bunch of the advertising fraternity turned out to support their heroes and after the defeat they showed what good fellows they are by entertaining the Stygian felines at the Elks Club on the fat of the land. The game was so attractive and exciting that a return engagement was immediately arranged for Thursday next at Camp Colt. Story of the caterwauling:

Sycamore Takes All Honors in Playground Annual Track Meet

When it comes to winning track meets With an overwhelming score; Why, you always want to look out For that scrappy Sycamore.

Blazing hot sun and lack of talent did not keep Sycamore from cleaning up yesterday at the playground track and field events at the island. War and its industry nearly eliminated this very interesting athletic diversion of Harrisburg, and there were few seniors to compete. Hence, no new record and a very small field of competitors. Nevertheless, Sycamore made a name for itself by winning in all activities, running, jumping, vaulting, in the light-weight class, which included all entries under seventy-five pounds, the Sycamore outscored their opponents by a large margin. The going was a bit more closely contested in the middleweight classes but the Sycamores moved to the fore in each of these.

When the final totals were taken, the Sycamores were credited with eighty-eight points, or in other words they piled up more points than all of the other playgrounds entered. Following are the summaries: Lightweight Class High Jump Miller, Emerald, first; Gilbert, Sycamore, second; Hoffman, Maclay, third; Broshier, Sycamore, fourth. Winning distance, 4 1/2 feet.

"RINGER" HELPS BELMONT WIN

Brutal Bickering in Industrial League Causes Protest, but Does Not Stop Game

The Belmonts won. The Belmonts didn't win. Yes they did. They beat the Baptists, 6-2, over at the island last night. Yes, but they had a ringer in the game, Rosenberg, who is not a member of the Belmont, but belongs to the Baptists. We'll play you, but whatever happens we'll protest the game and it won't count. The usual evening bicker broke out again and while anger raged and hot words passed the Belmonts went right ahead and won, 6-2. The game was a good one, at that, heavy artillery on the part of Belmont doing great damage.

Swatara Entertains the New Junior League Team

The newest entry into the Junior League, Crescents, was thoroughly initiated last evening into the mysteries of fast company by Swatara, every one of whose athletes had at least one clean hit. Pitcher Winks was blinking at a lively rate as the Swatara's swat his swan song, but biting his lips he faced the deluge bravely. The score: SWATARA R. H. O. A. E. Michlevitz, cf. 2 2 1 0 0 0

25,000 PEOPLE AT WILLIAMS GROVE

The Mechanicsburg Red Cross Chapter Has Big Day at Industrial Exhibit

Mechanicsburg, Pa., Aug. 23.—Hundreds of dollars will be poured into the coffers of the Red Cross through the efforts of the Mechanicsburg chapter assisted by the auxiliaries, yesterday, at the second annual Farmers' and Industrial Exhibit at Williams Grove and known as Red Cross Day.

On the grounds were exhibitors of farming implements and machinery, automobiles and merchants. Red Cross booths flourished and the "taggers" put in a busy day. A feature that attracted considerable attention was the miniature United States flag built around a kiddiecar, by Dan Wheeler, 29 Nineteenth street, Harrisburg. A Red Cross box occupied a prominent position on the ship and gathered in its quota of coins.

When Tom Marshall Went "Jugging" on Mississippi

"Jugging on the Mississippi river!" This is not a transgression of the prohibition laws, neither is it akin to "bootlegging." This method of fishing dates back to the advent of those Jesuit Fathers, who record the historic fact of "Jugging" in their early writings. The Indians who made their homes along the Mississippi, found a shortage—as usual—in jugs, there being an extreme scarcity of stoneware on the market. As a crude substitute the Indians secured from the buffalo, which at that time roamed the prairies, numerous bladders, which they fished, dried, inflated with air, tied with a deer sinew and then dried and smoked them until they much resembled parchment. They were then ready to be utilized as bladders during the annual fishing carnival, which usually extended over a period of several days, and was made a continuous round of pleasure. Canoes were loaded with many warriors, native and visiting, an extended trip was made up the river, to a point which would require a given time to float back to the established Indian village. At a given signal from the chief, all bladders with short lines and primitive hooks attached were thrown into the river, after having been baited with fish intestines. They are very seductive to catfish. A three or four-mile current floated them quietly along until the bait was assailed by a voracious channel catfish. Having hooked himself, the bladder immediately disappeared below the surface, there to remain until the fish slackened away, at which time the bladder would bob to the surface, in the interim, being towed by the hooked fish very rapidly and pursued by the Indians in their canoes, the first to grasp the traveling bladder would be the victor. The fish, when landed, the duration of the race depended upon the size and the pep of the fish that was hooked. The floating carnival, which was at all times followed by a free-for-all fish barbecue.

Tesreau and Plank in Red Cross Game At Cottage Hill Tomorrow Afternoon

A great crowd is expected to travel to Cottage Hill to-morrow when Jeff Tesreau, renowned righthand pitcher is to face Eddie Plank, the nation's southpaw celebrity, in a game between Steelton and Bethlehem, the entire receipts of which go to the Red Cross. An hour before the call of game, which begins at 2:30, the famous Steelton band will play gay airs to amuse the multitude.

The Red Cross folk are making preparations to take care of 5,000 spectators and ropes were stretched to-day along the side lines. Tickets are for sale to-day at Gorgas' drug store, Third street, and at Fairbank's cigar store, and at Fairbank's, to Steelton, first, and then either to Bethlehem or Wilmington, this game should be highly exciting, for outside of that Plank and Tesreau will pitch their arms off to win. This will be the last game played at Cottage Hill by major league talent. George "Kid" Stutz will not be part of this fracas, for the "Kid" is now at Camp Meade. He was valuable to Steelton in many a pinch and he made a host of friends with his speed and eagerness to help.

The Steelton management do not seem to be greatly alarmed at the closeness of the race. They say that if Steelton wins one of the two games remaining in the final race, they will get the flag. The Bethlehemites, however, do not take such a sure view of it. Says one writer: "While Steelton, league leaders, have a hold on first place in the standing, every team in the circuit with the exception of Pore River, has a chance of cutting down the Cockill crew and win out in the final race, which comes to a close on September 2. The lead enjoyed by Steelton is not as great as it seems when it is taken into consideration that team has two more games to play to complete the schedule of twenty games. All the other teams with the exception of Bethlehem and Sparrows Point have more games to play in the league lead.
