

J. D. CAMERON IS DEAD, AT DONEGAL

equal, and the two Senators upon more than one historic occasion ruled the destinies of the Republican party from Lancaster county.

Senator Cameron did much to help in the business development of Harrisburg. He was a builder and an investor at home, because he always considered Front and State streets as his place of residence.

When the East Harrisburg Railway was projected, he joined the group of men who founded the trolley system of this city, and was identified with other enterprises.

A race could be written about Senator Cameron's activities here, his close relationship to this city and vicinity, his notable personality and the part he played in the political affairs.

His Distinguished Career James Donald Cameron, secretary of war in Grant's second administration, United States Senator from Pennsylvania for twenty years, chairman of the Republican national committee in 1850, and the last great figure remaining from the period of American reconstruction, the son and successor to the fortunes and political power in Pennsylvania of his father, Simon Cameron.

He was a public benefactor to the city of Harrisburg in particular, and was a leader as an agriculturist, a railroad builder, a financier and a statesman.

He was born on the thirteenth day of May, 1833, at Middletown, Pennsylvania, where he was educated until he entered Princeton College, from which he graduated in the class of 1852.

Soon after that he married in Harrisburg, where his father had moved, Mary McCormick, the only daughter of James McCormick, at that time the leader of the Pennsylvania bar, and a man of great business acumen and enterprise.

By this marriage, Mr. Cameron had five children, three sons and two daughters, Mrs. William H. Bradley, Mrs. Alexander Rodgers, Miss Mary Cameron, Mrs. J. Williams Clark, and Mr. Charles W. Cameron.

His business career began as soon as he left Princeton, when he became a clerk in his father's bank at Middletown, and then he became president of it when it became the National Bank of Middletown.

After moving to Harrisburg he became interested in the Central Iron and Steel Company of Harrisburg, which he soon purchased from his father.

He brought many industries to Harrisburg, through his connection with them, among them the Pennsylvania Steel Company, and the Elliott-Fisher Company.

His business interests broadened and he became identified with the Northern Central Railroad, which extended from Baltimore to Canandaigua, New York, opening a route from Buffalo to the South.

He took an active interest in agriculture, being among the first to introduce Jersey cattle into Southeastern Pennsylvania.

He took an active interest in the development of the business interests which had been left by his father-in-law of which the Dauphin Deposit Trust Company, and the blast furnace, and steel rolling mills, now known as the Central Iron & Steel Company, were part.

His career as a public man began by early association with his father, Simon Cameron, one of the founders of the Republican party, and it was the confidence established by the father and the admiration shown by them in the organization of the party, the people of highest reputation in every community throughout the state which has enabled the Republican party in Pennsylvania to maintain its prestige and power ever since.

James Donald Cameron was Secretary of War in President Grant's cabinet from May 22nd, 1876 to March 3rd, 1877, when he succeeded his father in the United States Senate, having been elected to fill the unexpired term from which his father had resigned.

The funeral will take place from Senator Cameron's Harrisburg residence, Front and State streets, at a time to be fixed.

YOUNGSTERS ON ROMP HAVE DAY OF REAL SPORT

Thousands at Reservoir Park Have Merry Time at Annual Outing

More than 4,000 children of Harrisburg are to-day upholding the traditions of Romper Day by making Reservoir Park the scene of a monster children's festival and funfest.

The active period of his lifetime began before the Mexican War. During the period which intervened before Lincoln's election he was solicited to exchange services there, but such was the friendship which he held in mind, that he withdrew only because he wished to devote himself to his private affairs.

Beginning at 1.20 following an hour of story-telling, the afternoon program consisted of folk dances, races, contests and exhibitions. Late in the afternoon the prizes are to be awarded, and after a happy day the kiddies will be brought home again.

The program of the day's events is in charge of the City Park Department, with V. Grant Forrer, assistant superintendent, directly in charge. J. K. Staples, playground instructor and Miss Lillian Kamsky, instructor in folk dances are co-operating to make the affair the biggest and most successful ever held in the history of Romper Day observances.

Just look at some views caught by the Telegraph photograph while the boys and girls were in the midst of the Romper Day festivities. Thousands of them went home late this afternoon after indulging in all kinds of games, contests, folk dancing and most important of all, a big picnic luncheon, made possible through the generosity of the late Samuel Kunkel.

POWER COMPANY AGAIN FAILS TO SUPPLY CURRENT

Second Breakdown at Plant in Three Days Halts Industries, Delaying Work

For the second time within three days, electrical current again failed in Harrisburg because of another breakdown in the Cedar street plant of the Harrisburg Light and Power Company.

While the shortage of current lasted less time than any of the previous breakdowns, it covered a greater territory. Only in a few districts was there any electrical light or power during the period.
