

PROHIBITION IS ASSURED AFTER JULY 1, 1919

Liquor Forces Completely Overthrown as Powerful Political Influence

Washington, Aug. 30.—Bone-dry prohibition in the United States after July 1 of next year is assured by the passage in the Senate this afternoon of the prohibition amendment to the agricultural extension bill.

until to-morrow, when it will be voted upon. The measure passed without a record vote, a secret agreement having been made by the Senators that no one should ask for a roll call. This was done to prevent the anti-prohibitionists from placing themselves on record as still in favor of the saloon and its damnable effects and influences. The circumstances indicated the complete overthrow of the liquor interests as a factor in the politics of the nation. Even Senator Penrose and others who have fought openly for the saloon through all the years that prohibition has been a prominent issue were apparently glad to escape the necessity of voting for a continuance of the liquor traffic. "Dry" in Majority It had been clearly demonstrated that if a vote were taken the advocates of prohibition would present an overwhelming majority. The amendment adopted provides that the sale of all intoxicants shall be prohibited after June 30, 1919, and that the manufacture of beer shall be prohibited on May 1, 1919. In the meantime, the President is authorized to establish by executive order completely dry zones around any mines, factories or military establishments important to the prosecution of the war. The action of the Senate had been a foregone conclusion for months, but it was not expected that the opposition to prohibition would collapse so completely as it did. The President, it was shown, had sought to have the date when the bill becomes operative postponed until January 1, 1920, which would have given the liquor interests eight months in which to reap profits by debauching the manhood and womanhood of the nation engaged in war. The advocates of the saloons in the Senate discussion to-day also urged that this postponement be provided, in order that the bankers and other persons who hold liquor securities may have better opportunity to realize upon them. Senator Sheppard said he had informed the President that the majority in the Senate would not agree to a postponement beyond July 1, and that no arguments could be presented which would change this determination. Chairman L. B. Musgrove, of the National Anti-Saloon League's campaign committee, issued a statement predicting the prohibition constitutional amendment would be adopted by March, 1919, and become effective in March, 1920. The war prohibition measure, he said, would operate to expedite national prohibition. Besides the fourteen states which already have ratified the amendment, Mr. Musgrove claimed eighteen—Alabama, Maine, Kansas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Michigan, Arkansas, Iowa, Idaho, Nebraska, Michigan, Utah, Indiana and New Mexico—"concededly" will ratify the amendment, Florida, Wyoming, Minnesota, Missouri and Vermont, he asserted, are five "wet" states certain to ratify the amendment, while Nevada, Illinois and Ohio are "virtually sure," he said. In Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and California, he declared, there is a "spendid fighting chance."

An amendment to the Sheppard substitute permitting the sale of beer and wine up to June 30, 1920, was introduced by Senator Phelan. Responding to questions by Senators Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and Simmons, of North Carolina, Senator Sheppard gave as his opinion that the prohibition amendment would not interfere with the manufacture of beer, wine and whiskey for medicinal, sacramental and nonbeverage purposes or for export. "I don't consider the passage of this bill a great victory for prohibition," said Senator Smoot. "I think it only delays the day for prohibition. I'd like to see prohibition now. Everybody hopes this war will be over by June 30, 1919, and this bill does not take effect until then. Then it will be this thing all over again."

Senator Kirby, of Arkansas, charged that the federal government has been favoring the liquor interests ever since the war began. He said last winter, during the coal shortage, when industrial plants east of the Mississippi river were closed temporarily, not a brewery in the United States was closed and when a limitation was placed on the use of flour in bread a man could buy all the beer he wanted. The Arkansas Senator declared

Bainbridge Colby, of the shipping board, who said if beer and wine were taken away from shipyard employees, production would be reduced twenty-five per cent. "I talked like an agent of the liquor industry," Calls Amendment a "Fake" Senator Wadsworth, of New York, said as a war prohibition measure this amendment was a "fake" and that there never had been any "stability of opinion" on the part of its supporters. In view of the fact that it will take two years to transport the troops to France, Senator Wadsworth suggested it might require that long to bring them back, and he asked Senator Sheppard the purpose of extending the operations of the measures until the "termination of demobilization." The Texas Senator replied that provision was inserted because the war might end sooner than is now anticipated. Citing daily rations of wine issued to French and Italian soldiers and their valor and hardihood, Senator Phelan said: "I submit wine is a cardinal necessity for winning the war. And if you are giving an argument for steadfastness and courage I must submit the use of beer by the German people." He emphasized the shipping board's objection to prohibition during the war as likely to interfere with industrial production and argued that as national prohibition is virtually certain in the spring of 1920 by adoption of the constitutional amendment, a sufficient time be allowed for all interests to close out business. GETS COMMISSION Charles Herbert Delaney, 3945 Penn street, has been commissioned a First Lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare section of the army. Information to this effect was issued from Washington last night.
