German Reserves Unable to Stem Tide of Battle

London, Sept. 3.—Southeast of Lagnicourt, the southernmost point at which the British have a hold on the Hindenburg line, the Germans to-day fruitlessly threw in what is believed to be every reserve available who, however, put up a weak resistance. The second Prussian division, considered one of the enemy's best, was rushed up from Cambrai, but the men were so worn that they were easily pushed back. Hundreds of prisoners were taken to-day. If the line of the Senece canal is taken it will be possible to shell Cambrai. There is every indication that the Germans are being swept back rapidly south of the Scarpe.

This was evidenced to-day by the field being strewn with the dead of the Prussian guards. Long lines of them show where the guards counterattacked five times in a vain effort to stem the onslaught.
