18 TO 36, ARE
TO GO IN OCT.

Single Men of Nation Will Be Inducted Into Army Quickly

Washington, Sept. 6.—Large numbers of single men between the ages of nineteen and thirty-six who will register on September 12 and are without occupational or domestic obligations are to be inducted into the military service during October. General Crowder in outlining yesterday many of the features relative to the new registration, said that as soon as the new questionnaires are returned by the registrants "the boards will proceed first to examine and classify first of all the questionnaires of these age groups that the President may designate." "This designation has not yet been made," General Crowder said, but he added: "This prior examination of the questionnaires of the age groups, which are to be first liable to call, will enable the boards to be prompt with a sufficient number of men to fill the October registrations." "18 to 36 the Limit" Although General Crowder declined to state what ages would be included in this special class, Secretary of War Baker indicated several days ago his approval of the plan to expedite the work of sending of men to the training camps by classification of men within the ages of nineteen to twenty-one and thirty-one to thirty-six. "This means simply that much time will be saved by examining the questionnaires of such men and leave the registrants in the eighteen-year and thirty-six to forty-five classes, which offer greater opportunities for later examination. The eighteen-year class presents a special problem, due to the educational plans now being perfected, while the thirty-six to forty-five will furnish a relatively smaller number of men for the Army, due to industrial, domestic and physical reasons."

Constant Flow of Men General Crowder said to-day that new speed records are required of the local draft boards between September day and January 1 if a constant flow of men to the training camps is to be maintained, and much valuable time will be saved by laying aside the questionnaires for later examination. The eighteen-year class presents a special problem, due to the educational plans now being perfected, while the thirty-six to forty-five will furnish a relatively smaller number of men for the Army, due to industrial, domestic and physical reasons. "As I have stated on several occasions," General Crowder said, "the supply of men in Class 1, under the old age limit, has been practically exhausted or practically so by the end of this month. To prevent an interruption in the flow of men to the camps we must begin in earnest now the new class into the service next month; whether they can do so depends entirely upon the energy of the local boards and the co-operation of all parties concerned. There will be some men left over from the August 24 registration, which fact will aid me in meeting the initial calls for October."

Capt. Roosevelt Sees Little Son Born Since He Went to France

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 6.—Captain Archibald B. Roosevelt, first of the four sons of Colonel Roosevelt to be wounded in action, spent one night this week at the family home at Sagamore Hill, after surgeons at the Army Base Hospital at Williamsbridge had granted him an overnight leave so that he could come here to see his five-month-old son, Archie, who was born in Boston while Captain Roosevelt was in France. While the surgeons were making minute examination of the shrapnel wounds in his arm Captain Roosevelt told them that he would like to see his young son again at Sagamore Hill. Upon learning that the officer had never seen the child the surgeon said that he could leave the hospital for the night upon condition that he would be "careful." Despite the slight stiffness of the healed wounds in his right knee Captain Roosevelt made good speed back to the visitors' room with the news. The surgeon followed him, "Do you call running being careful?" When the motor drew up at Sagamore Hill, Archie, Jr., was asleep in a carriage under a tree. He objected at being disturbed by tones that stirred the admiration of his grandfather, but he became quiet when his interest was directed to the gold and blue stripes on the sleeve of his father's uniform, denoting a year's service at the front and a wound in battle. Colonel Roosevelt and his wife remained on the veranda, watching Captain and Mrs. Roosevelt as they sat under the tree with the baby. Archie's mother expressed fear that he might strain his arm trying to hold the baby, but the Colonel said it probably was a good thing that the surgeon wasn't there to oversee his efforts. Captain Roosevelt's arm is paralyzed because of shrapnel fragments cut the nerves in the elbow and he is forbidden to try to raise it from his side. It is not in a sling, but is bound in a bandage of elastic and linen. Surgeons here have expressed no opinion upon the condition of the arm, but it was reported that surgeons in France said it would be several months before he would be able to use it freely. The wound in his knee is healed completely and he is not lame.

Gouraud, French Army Chief, Lauds Rainbow

With the American Forces North of Soissons, Sept. 6.—In an interview yesterday by General Gouraud, the famous French army chief, said the Americans had acquitted themselves wonderfully well both in the defensive and offensive fighting, bearing the brunt of the great German attack in the Champagne between July 15 and 25. General Gouraud stated that the 42d ("Rainbow") division occupied positions in the battle zone alongside the finest French troops, fighting equally bravely and gallantly. "Americans may be exceedingly proud of her army," said General Gouraud. "It is already showing ability and evincing magnificent possibilities of becoming among the finest troops in the world."
