Nervy Knabe, of Cubs,

Will Take Defeat Hard If the Chicago Cubs take the count to-day no one will feel the blow more keenly than Otto Knabe, who has been acting coach or the team and who was an important factor in the development of the machinery. Knabe, in his prime, was one of the tricklest of infielders. He possessed that nerve of a lion and never feared to attempt anything on any ball-player. The individual made no difference to him. He probably has had more fights and arguments on the ball field than any other man in the game, and that does not bar Johnny Evers. Charlie Herzog and Miller Husgins. Knabe loved to dispute: it was part of his aggressiveness and he could not play the game well unless he wrangled with one of his opponents.

He did not lose many battles and seldom failed in any of his tricks, except once. That time he was outguessed by Joe Tinker, who then managed the Cincinnati club, in 1913, and it is an event in Knabe's life that he will remember as long as he lives. And it was being outguessed in that play that caused the memorable fight Tinker and Knabe had at second base in Cincinnati, for which both were chased from the field and later fined by the president of the league.

Knabe was always a quick thinker on the field. He was doing things to upset the plans of the opponents. This day Tinker was perched on first base. A ball was driven to right field on a line. When it was hit, Knabe saw that Tinker would attempt to make third on the play and it was out of him to slow Joe up and make him cover more ground. To do this he placed himself in such position that Tinker would have to go around him, thereby losing time. Tinker was on the alert and instantly saw Knabe's bit of stratery and acted.

As he approached the middle bag, Tinker, instead of running to the outside of Knabe, shortened his tride and turned to the inside. As he reached the infielder, he hooked him on the jaw with his right hand, dazing him and sending him out of the way. For a moment Knabe did not know what had happened, but he turned to line field.

That was not the end of the combat. Two innings later Tinker was again settled on first and a long fly was driven to deep right field. Tinker, as soon as the ball was caught, broke for second. He made the base easily and Knabe knew it, but nevertheless he took the throw and to avenge himself for the punch he received he dived into Tinker, throwing all his weight into him and punching at weight into him and punching at the same time. In a flash they were mauling around the ground. No damage was done and they were separated and banished.

Marysville, Pa., Sept. 10.—Sergeant Robert P. Palmer, formerly of the machine gun battalion of the First Regiment of United States Infantry, recently with the regiment in a specifical officers' training camp at Honolulu, has just been made a second lieutenant of infantry. Notice of his successful completion of this special course has just been received by his father, A. B. Palmer, Myrtle avenue. Sergeant Palmer enlisted in the army almost five years ago and since that time has been located at Honolulu. Several months ago, when it was decided to send a number of men of the regiment to a training school on the far-away island, he was one of the 188 men from the regiment of 3,600 men to be selected for general proficiency in military tactics.

One brother, W. Foster Palmer, is a corporal in Battery B. Fifth Field Artillery, serving on the French battalefront.

Nature's velvet carpet of grass and the leaves of the giants of the forest have been touched by the artistic hand of Jack Frost, wielding and push-ing nature's brush which has been dipped into the variegated shades. Bur first lesson in color black dipped into the variegated shades. Our first lesson in color blending tells us that yellow and blue, when blended gives us the green. With one sweep of nature's brush we have the green immediately changed to the golden, the green carpet has changed to a corn husk yellow, the leaves upon the trees have changed to incorporate crimsor. red, brown dashes, with a background of yellow. Leaves drop from mid air, volplaning down on to the undisturbed surface of the water, to eventually drift ashore or become water logged and sink. At this time comes the fisherman's hankering to go afield, the abode with its seductive bowers of Dame Nature where conclusions may be tried with those scaled beauties, ever ready and willing to give you a fight after you have set your hook into that non-nerve cartilaginous and bony structure surrounding a fish's mouth. We will make a few casts for that fearless and aggressive bandit of the lilip pads, rocks and weeds. The Pike.

being a question of "survival of the fittest," with Br'er Pike.

In cold deep water, you get less leaping and cavorting. In shallow water with hard bottom and no weeds, a muscallonge or pike will introduce a fine line of high and lofty diving. They will fight down, rushing and sounding the cold, deep water, occasionally breaking water, in their efforts to dislodge the hook. September and October are the very best months in the year for successful fishing. Break away, forgetting dull cares and busines vicissitude. Let nature take you by the hand and again introduce you to the real angles of living. Return with me to the primitive days of your ancestors, when they dwelt in caves and fishing was a necessity. To-day you are fishing because it guarantees health and longevity. Reference to remote ancestors does not mean the days of Darwinism, when cocoanuts were coveted sustenance. But I do say you are flirting with your ancestors of the Darwin period, when you refuse to cuddle with nature and do battle with the pike or muskies during the logical months of September and October.
