Pitcher Vaughn's Perfect Control Wins Fifth Game For Cubs

More than 25,000 baseball enthusiasts waited one hour yesterday for the fifth world series game to start at Boston while the big-leaguers of Cubs and Red Sox argued with the National Commission for a heavier share of the profits of the tournament. By a mere eyelash the most startling scandal ever attached to the game was avoided after the crowd had about reached the end of its patience.

A tragic feature of the situation was the appearance of hundreds of wounded officers and soldiers, survivors of the Marne, many of whom were brought in on invalid chairs. The immense arena rose as one to cheer these heroes, and their echoes resounded to the room where the ball players were playing. John Johnson and Gary Sherman, telling such a tale of heroism that the big-leaguers instantly surrendered.

Captured Mail Shows Poor German Morale

With the British Army in France, Sept. 11.—Some idea of the state of the German mind may be gathered from the following quotations picked at random from captured documents and letters. One German writes from the front: "I don't know what we'll go back to the front. It may be any day. No one knows, but watch for a big battle. You'll learn when we get back and hang over the fellows that fall! Our regiment has been constituted by General Dickman and also Pershing, so you see your sarcastic smile about us kids being like a bunch of sheep, kidding about our kid bunch when I spoke to you reverend in New York. The next time you hear from me, they'll have more honors. I can't write often, for we're always on the move. We'd forgive him much, but when he picks out and picks on our helpless pals, it makes a fellow feel like walking on the face of every Fritz he sees."
