

VOLUNTEERS ARE NEEDED TO WORK FOR RED CROSS

Every Front Line Parcel Saves a Life—Home Battle Cry

Every front line parcel saves a life. It takes two hours at the most to make a front line parcel. Two hours of your spare time every day will save the life of a soldier. This is the essence of a message addressed to the women of Harrisburg by the local chapter of the American Red Cross, asking for hundreds of workers to assist in turning out the chapter's allotment of front line parcels. It is a critical time, according to the appeal, and it is asked that Harrisburg women concentrate every effort in an intense effort to do the work at home.

ber of workers who worked harder. The Red Cross officials appreciate this willingness to sacrifice on the part of the women who work, but it is urged that the thousands of women in the city who have never been inside Red Cross rooms should get to work at once on sweaters, front line parcels, socks and other comforts for the men who are now laying down their lives for democracy. "The war must be brought home to Harrisburg! The men and women here are doing splendid work, but those women who have little to do, who find time hanging heavily on their hands, must wake up! We must have workers! If we don't have more workers we can't send our proper amount of material to the boys. Will you help?" the appeal urges.

Local Delegates to Plan Winter's War Work at Philadelphia Conference

Delegates from Harrisburg and vicinity will attend three conferences in Philadelphia next Tuesday and Wednesday at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. They are Liberty Loan, Food Administration and the Women's Council of National Defense. Mrs. John W. Rely is local chairman of the Women's Council of National Defense. The local chairman throughout the state will attend the convention. Donald McCormick, county food administrator, will attend the food conference. Howard Helms, state food administrator, will confer with the local food administrators of the various counties. Several from Harrisburg and vicinity will attend the Liberty Loan conference called by E. F. Passmore, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of the Philadelphia district, of which Harrisburg is a subdivision. Donald McCormick, district chairman; J. Clyde Myton, organizing secretary; Andrew S. Patterson, city chairman; William Jennings, county chairman, and the chairmen of Perry and Juniata counties, will attend the conference. A new method of handling the subscriptions for Liberty Bonds has been suggested which will be adopted by George S. Reinhold, industrial chairman. Instead of calling an industrial establishment one hundred per cent patriotic because all its employees subscribed to one Liberty Bond apiece, the aggregate of the payrolls will be considered. Thus an industrial establishment whose workers are doing war work at inflated wages will not get as much credit as the department store whose employees are getting only slightly more than the pre-war prices, if the employees as a rule buy only one bond apiece.

U. E. Publishing House to Be Dedicated Oct. 1

Dedication of the new United Evangelical Church publishing house will in all probability take place on October 1, publishing house officials announced today. The date will be definitely fixed and further plans perfected at a meeting of officials at the offices in the old house on Tuesday evening.

Bishop U. F. Swengle, of Harrisburg, and Bishop W. H. Fouke, of Naperville, Ill., will be the principal speakers at the dedicatory ceremonies. The entire board of publication, including lay and ministerial representatives, will be present and will have places on the program. Officers of this board are: The Rev. J. W. Thompson, York, president; J. W. Domer, of Johnstown, vice-president; and the Rev. J. H. Shirey, Philadelphia, secretary-treasurer.

RUSSIAN, PRUSSIAN OR CHRISTIAN WAY?

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

"After the war"—that is the phrase that is heard ten thousand times a day all over the world, and in Europe especially. Even the new set rookie in France understands the meaning of the word "apres la guerre." Those who have experienced most of war are the ones who think ever of the days to come, and this good time coming even more than they talk about the war. Battle smoke has only opened their eyes to the vision of a new world for which they are fighting. The world is to have a fresh start and a new chance, "apres la guerre."

All dreams are to come true, after the war. After the powers of evil which have terrorized humanity for years have been forced to their knees, and their arch criminality held to personal responsibility by the legal processes of civilization, and a piece of righteousness has been effected, there is to come a new order, a new order almost utopian. Thoughtful persons are gravely concerned as they realize the magnitude of mankind's duties as new conditions after the war.

For the supreme problem of the world, after the war has been won, is how to reach and maintain the common conviction of mankind demands. Whence will come the power and the impulses that will transform and put into effect a universal desire into a workable reality? It is easier to talk about what ought to be than to effect it. Nobody should complain of the order, or of the new, who is order trying, in some definite, practical fashion, to bring it to pass. A world full of cities, with a calamity like that was itself.

The Blunder of Bolshevism. A new program will not make a new world. Only the half-baked can think so. The Bolshevism in Russia the fulfillment of a mere program. They have scheduled utopia for immediate delivery. Everything that ever dreamed as desirable for an improved social order, they put into their edicts. Forcibly hard work, social disability, unhygienic living conditions—all were abolished by the deliverances of the Bolshevism when they took control in Russia. The rich were despoiled, and self-government was inaugurated. From the standpoint of the theoretical and radical socialist, the Bolshevism program was perfect. Even today there are some adulate-pated sentimentalists who support it. Yet if there is anywhere on earth a spot more like chaos than Russia, it is not to be found in Russia. Bolshevism has let loose a veritable reign of terror upon the poor land that once was Russia, and its selfishness, starvation, and death have stalked hand in hand.

Preachers and teachers, and every other person who thinks, should consider well the lesson of Russia. Humanity cannot be legislated or revolutionized into a new order of altruism. All our short-cuts and swift panaceas for social reform have been discredited. Let us at least be grateful that we come to the end of the war with the lesson of Bolshevism well learned.

Germany's False God. Still keeping in mind the goal that we are considering, a new and better world order, we are bound to look next at the German way. The program of "cleansing" is the great good of Germans, and, incidentally, of all other peoples, who should be subordinated to Germany will be served by the dominance of education, efficiency and science. Others beside Germans had made a fetish of this root idea of Prussianism. Educated and "liberal" persons especially were convinced that mankind could be educated out of all its sins and shortcomings—lifted by their own bootstraps, as it were.

If hell has ever had any better ally than Germany we do not know it. All the forces of evil have been strengthened by Prussianism. Even made disciples by the exponents of "kultur." The universities and scholars, to whom all the world of learning used to bow down as to its gods, have proved to be the insipid and bulwark of a conception of life which is so intolerable that civilization is giving millions of its fairest youth lives to wipe it out utterly as a Prussian officer, we shall learn the lesson, written on the ravaged soil of Belgium and France, repeated in Armenia and the Holy Land, and in half a dozen other little nations, and traced in blood on every sea, that mere education, of the most thorough and scientific kind, may contain within it the very worst traits of human nature. We cannot make mankind over by science. That is the valuable lesson that Germany has taught us. Textbooks and universities and arrogant savants are no remedy for what is wrong with human life.

Evolution as a War Casualty. Not that the attention of twenty million persons in North America is fixed for the present week upon this subject of a transformed world, let us think it clear through. Two major methods remain for consideration. Social revolution has failed before our eyes. So has education to the nth degree. Let us accept for a moment another pet remedy, "evolution." There is a large school of persons who, not content with accepting the doctrine of evolution in its proper scientific place, make a shibboleth out of it. They believe that humanity is going to "evolve" out of all of its ills. By the processes of survival and selection, man will rise to heavenly levels. The theory of evolution is the bromine cord of the highbrows.

Possibly the idea would work, if we could only wait long enough. I take down the Code of Hammurabi, which was posted at crossroads in Mesopotamia more than four thousand years ago. In it we see mirrored this ancient civilization. We are rudely jolted from our modern complacency to find that in mentality, in social grasp, in material sense of governmental responsibility, these old Babylonians were as efficient as our own. In some respects they were really ahead of us. Our evolution from the days of Hammurabi is scarcely perceptible. The scholars admit that the ancient civilization of Mesopotamia represented as high a level of brain power and constructive ability as we possess today.

Chamber of Commerce Urges Early Shopping

The Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce is co-operating with the Council of National Defense in urging early Christmas shopping. Circulars put out by the Council of National Defense are being distributed by the chamber to the local merchants. The poster declares that at a recent conference of the retail merchants called before the Council of National Defense, it was decided that the retailers will not increase their working force during the Christmas season over the usual forces. An effort will be made to restrict deliv-

Wants to Be Shot if Heaven Is Like This War Hospital

OH City, Pa., Sept. 13.—In a letter just received Mounted Scout Erroll H. Collins, of the 112th infantry, states that he is in a hospital recovering from the effects of gas while under fire. In his letter he says: "Gee! Maybe you don't think it's great to be taken to hospital, put in a bed between real sheets, and hear the 'honest to goodness' murmuring of a real American girl's voice. Why, if heaven is anything like that I would want to get shot."
