JULY 4 IN FRANCE

LETTERS FROM A DAUPHIN IN BOY TO HIS MOTHER

Escadrille Spad 32, Secteur Postal 12, July 16, 1918.

Dear Mother: It sure is getting hot around here now, and the sun is not the cause of all, either. Kaiser Bill has been taking hands too, you have probably noticed from the papers. We were having such a good time when he started in too, for you see it was "fourth of July" night, and we were celebrating with six saxophones and a singer, donated by an American battalion nearby.

Escadrille Spad, 38, Secteur Postal, 12, July 15, 1918.

Dear Mother: Will you write me another letter, but so many things have happened that I have not the time to write them down as they occurred. I have been up during the three nights I was here I have slept in as many different places. The first night we were to sleep in a room reserved for the village, but owing to some mistake, I and my comrades and were billeted in a bunch of infantry barracks.

There was a French doctor there and a captain at that, and he was as drunk as a fiddler.

Believe me the civilian population was so scared that the women even died of fright. The next morning one of the pilots sleeping in town found the tail of one of the bombs. As a soldier he could ask for nothing better, but it would be rather unhandy to carry around, being some three feet in length. No, I am not collecting souvenirs. Not after what happened last night. I lost nearly all my baggage, one of my new uniforms. Two other Americans are in the same boat.

The Republicans as patriots and voters are loyal to the President in his vigorous prosecution of the war, and they have given him the backbone and stamina that his own party called for in its criticism of the support of the Republican leaders in both branches of Congress.
