The clerks forged ahead at every opportunity and the first reading of the bill virtually was completed before adjournment last night. Chairman Kitchin and other leaders confidently predict that the bill will be passed not later than to-morrow afternoon. Every effort will be made toward accomplishing that result.

The fight on cotton, steel products and other combatted features not in the bill will come to-day. The paragraph levying a ten per cent, tax on "tapestries and textiles for furniture coverings or hanging in the interior decoration of buildings" will be the first peg on which to hang a tax on cotton.

Mr. Moore, of Pennsylvania, will propose a tax of three dollars per bale on all cotton used in the manufacture of these tapestries and textiles. If successful he will offer the same amendment as applicable to bathing suits, hunting garments and all articles of clothing appearing in the bill.

bathing suits, hunting garments and all articles of clothing appearing in the bill.

The explosion of a hornet's nest would not have occasioned more excitement than Mr. Moore's announcement. Members from the Southern states poured into the hall in readiness to stem the threatened tide. Some shouted for immediate action. One cried that nothing must be "left hanging over that will hammer down the cotton market further."

The business, or occupational license tax of $10 proved a stumbling block, because of confusion over its application, and it was determined to consider having the section redrafted to-day. Representative Robbins, of Pennsylvania, said it would apply to ministers, authors, schoolteachers and the like, but Representatives Garner and Longsworth, of the Ways and Means Committee, declared it would not apply to salaried persons but only firms, such as law partnerships, advertising, dental concerns and the like.
