WORKERS MAKING FAMED TROUPE TO READY FOR DRIVE

Train With War Relics Will Stop at Freight Station on October 1

Liberty Loan officials in charge of the drive in Steelton expect to make some important changes in regard to the meeting of the committee which is scheduled for Monday evening in Frey's hall. While no changes have yet been made, a definite statement will be issued within the next several days.

In order to boost the loan in Steelton the war exhibit train sent out by the government, will be here on October 1, arriving at 7:45 a. m. and leaving at 10:45 a. m. The train will stop at the Pennsylvania freight station, Front and Trevelick streets. On exhibition will be numerous war trophies captured by the Yanks in France. Included will be hand grenades, siege guns, Boche rifles, bayonets and German trench mortars. In addition there will be several carloads of war material used by the American army and the Allies, including helmets, air bombs, depth bombs, various sized shells, and anti-aircraft guns.

The Bethlehem Steel Company will leave unchanged its system by which employees may subscribe for bonds and have the payments deducted from their salaries.

Foils Highwayman by Hiding Pay Envelope

Carl Deik, an old employe at the steel works, was assaulted and rendered unconscious last Tuesday night by an unknown negro. When the latter attempted to rob the prostrate man he found Deik's pockets empty, the employe having hidden his pay envelope under the seat of a car. Deik escaped with severe lacerations about the scalp which were treated at the Emergency Hospital at the plant. The assault took place in the sand house and was the latest of a series of attacks by negroes on men of the plant.

Rubber Brings Fancy Prices For the Red Cross

A pile of old rubber lately gathered by the Steelton Chapter of the Red Cross was disposed of to the highest bidder yesterday morning to the tune of $270, which went into the society's coffers here. Simon Michelovitz bought for $200 a discarded automobile tire at the Lawn playgrounds. Other junk and glass bottles brought $60.

STEELTON RESERVES NOW IN ONE COMPANY

The Steelton Reserves will be continued as a single company, according to a decision made last night at their meeting in the High School building. Company A and Company B will be made a single company without any division. Last night Mex Reider was elected captain of the Reserves. Formerly he was captain of old Company B. W. A. Chick was elected first lieutenant. The elected officers will retain their commissions until other officers have been elected. The regular drill night will be announced by Captain Reider in a few days.

PATRICK COLLINS

A paralytic stroke suffered at an early hour yesterday morning caused the death of Patrick Collins, an oldtime resident of this borough. He was 68 years old and lived at 406 Linden street. Funeral services will be held in St. James' Catholic Church Saturday morning. The Rev. Joseph Murphy, of St. Francis' church, Harrisburg, officiating. The deceased is survived by a son, James Collins, and a daughter, Miss Teresa Collins.

MAKING RELIGIOUS SURVEY

A religious survey of the borough is being made this afternoon and evening by a force of 100 canvassers. Statistics concerning the church relations and religious data of borough residents are being collected. The cards will be classified by the members of the borough at their meeting at the parish house of Trinity Presbyterian Church next Monday morning.

French Marvel At Speed of U. S. Army

New York.—"Since Chateau Thierry there is not a thing in France an American wants that he cannot get," declared Dr. Walter Damsrosch in an address before the American Friends of German Democracy at the Liederkreis, 111 East Fifty-eighth street.

"The French people," he said, "could not understand how this nation, that had always been engaged in peace industries and projects, could develop such an army of warriors in so short a time. The American and French soldiers have formed a rare spirit of comradeship of their own, and may be seen walking along the boulevards with their arms on each other's shoulder in the same manner as little girls at recess time. While watching these boys I heard a funny thing. The French soldier, as you have probably heard, receives but ten cents a day. One day a Frenchman and an American were loafing along when the following conversation took place: "How much wages you get?" asked the French poilu. "Aw, only a dollar a day," was the reply.

"The Frenchman was taken aback, but he regained himself and said: "Oh, well, if the war lasts twenty years I will get as much as you." "One other amusing incident occurred on the way over. Fortunately I saw no submarines on the whole trip over or, better still, none saw me. Dr. Hans Sulzer, the Swiss in charge of German affairs in this

'PEACOCK THRONE' COST $20,000,000

Chair Was of Solid Gold, Profusely Studded With Gems

London.—The throne of Russia was, and is—for, although it stands empty, it has not been injured or dismantled—a wide chair, placed upon a dais approached by several steps, and at the end of an enormous hall of costly marbles. Four pillars with huge carved bears' paws for feet, support an ornate canopy above it. The chair itself is of gold, ivory and precious woods, ablaze with inset jewels. It is upholstered with emine.

Of almost equal splendor is the throne of the Kaiser in Berlin. It is massively built of costly woods much carved, and is said to have cost 40,000 pounds. The arms are in part of solid gold set with emeralds. Its very high back is adorned with the imperial coat-of-arms, in gold, and the Kaiser, when he occupies it, sits beneath a canopy of cloth of gold, with one foot resting upon a cushioned stool covered with the same material.

Great Britain preserves a taste for splendor on state occasions, but the throne of King George, in the House of Lords, is built fundamentally of material chosen for sentiment rather than for magnificence. It is of British oak adorned with ivory, gold and silver, and is draped with priceless tapestry. On the back of this chair of state are the emblematic lion and unicorn, carved and gilded. The arms of the throne terminate in a pair of lions' heads of gold with open mouths.

Presumably, however, there will never be a throne to compare with that of the Mogul emperors of Hindustan. The famous "peacock throne" at Delhi cost at least 4,000-000 pounds—possibly twice that sum. Behind it stood two life-sized peacocks, enamelled with rubies, sapphires, emeralds and other precious stones of colors appropriate to represent the birds in life.

The chair was of solid gold profusely studded with gems and surmounted by a canopy upheld by twelve golden pillars. On either side was an umbrella (an Oriental symbol of sovereignty) of crimson velvet, embroidered and fringed with pearls. It was carried off to Teheran in 1739 by Nadir Shah, the Persian conqueror, after the sack of Delhi, and was eventually broken up.

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCEMENT
Blain, Pa., Sept. 26.—Announcement has been made of the marriage of the Rev. John Franklin Harkins, of State College, son of Prof. Simon E. Harkins, of Blain, and Miss Mary Katherine Wagner, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Wagner, of Pittsboro, which was solemnized at the home of the bride at Pottsgrove, on September 18. The bride's father performed the ceremony.

Fashionable Croft Turbans, $16.50

Since the charm of the wardrobe depends very nearly upon the hat—its style and becomingness—hats are of paramount importance when Autumn clothes are under discussion.

A variety which meets every individual preference, which considers the woman whose expenditure must be limited quite as seriously as her whose one interest is to select the most becoming hat regardless of price—is to be found in our Showing of Fall Hats.

Ostrich in curled, uncurled and burnt effects is a leading trimming, and many models owe their beauty and softness to its adornment. There are gold brocades, iridescent plumage, novelty flowers, beautiful wings and numerous other things that are employed to make the new hats appealingly smart and modish.

SHOP EARLY

Why It Is Necessary

The Government announces that the usual channels of transportation will be closed to the delivery of Christmas gifts after

December 5th

We will not be permitted to employ extra salespeople to handle the holiday trade, but must endeavor to spread that business over the entire period from now until Christmas.

Therefore, we desire to give widespread publicity to the absolute need of beginning your Christmas shopping as early as possible. Our Holiday stocks are fast nearing that state of completeness that will help you do your shopping without delay, both to the advantage of your Government and yourself.
