BALTIMOREAN COMMITS SUICIDE

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 28.—John Burke, a middle aged man, whose home is at Baltimore, but who had come to Highfield for his health and was boarding with W. F. Beswanger, that place, to a fit of despondency ended his life by firing a thirty-two caliber shot through his head. He had gone to Baltimore several days prior to the tragedy thinking he had sufficiently improved in health to resume his work. He shortly thereafter decided to return to Highfield in order to consult a physician at the Sabillasville Sanatorium concerning his case. Upon arriving at Highfield from Baltimore he went to the Sanatorium but was unable to get an audience with the physician and he returned to the home of Mr. Beswanger. After packing his trunk the intention of again returning to the city he lay down across the bed and shortly after used the pistol to destroy himself. A note was found stating that he had become tired of life and thought he would end it all.
