HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH

DCTOBER 8, 1918.

There will be no crew at Pennsylvania this season. This was announced yesterday by Edward R. Bushnell, graduate manager of athletics at the Red and Blue institution. It has been decided to abolsh the rowing sport for the duration of the war. This move was action of the war. This have all of tuated by the S. A. T. C. ruling to the effect that the students will only be allowed an hour and half for be allowed an hour and hait for sports in the afternoon. The taking off of the Thirty-third street trolley by which the crew candidates were accustomed to ride direct to the varsity boathouse on Boathouse Row in Fairmount Park, several weeks ago also played a prominent part in abolishing the crow sport. The time allotted for practice would not permit the stu-dents to make the trip to and from the park.

dents to make the trip to and from the park. Joe Wright, the veteran Red and Blue crew coach, returned to his home in Canada yesterday. His son has been ailing for some time, and Joe was anxious to get to his bed-side. He waited for several weeks here to know what action the mili-tary authorities at Penn would take toward 'to branch of sport. His con-tract still calls for another year, and he will likely be re-engaged to serve it out after the Huns have met their downfall.

er reach the greatest efficiency; At what age is his provess su-perior to his efforts at other times? A little study of the ages at which ballplayers have had their great year is interesting. It shows that at about twenty-five or twenty-six the maximum of ef-ficiency is reached. Honus Wagner had his great-est year in 1900. At least he reached his maximum as a bats-man that year and his fielding was never better. In 1900 Honus was twenty-six years old. He batted .380 for the season. Napoleon Lajole had his best year in 1901, when he was twen-ty-six. That year the great Frenchman batted for an as-tounding total of .422. Cobb's star year was in 1911, when he was twenty-five. That year Cobb batted .420 and amassed 248 hits and 147 runs. When it is considered that there are few batters who get beyond 100 runs or 200 hits a season it may be seen how far out ahead of the field-Cobb was that year. Matty had something like six-teen great years, but the great-est of these was in 1965, when he was twenty-five. That year Matty won thirty-one and lost fit hese suit of forty and pitched three shut-out games against the Athletics in the world series, an achievement which has never been equaled. Ed Walsh's super year, when he won forty games and lost fi-teen, besides saving a number for other pitchers, was in 1908, when he was twenty-six then. His record of forty wins has been beaten by only one pitcher, Chesbro having gone him one better.
