THE PLOTTERS A New Serial of East and West

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER L. wash and change before supper, and The room into which Amos Chapin I do not care to keep Mrs. Chapin led John Butler was one that the waiting." younger man had never entered be-fore. "You've done that long enough al-ready," the farmer accused, his face

It was small, containing a table flushing with rage. "That's what I and two chairs. On the table were want to talk to you about. If you're several agricultural manuals, some going to stay here you will have to old almanacs and some small farm- follow the rules of this house and ing implements—in need of repairs, It was evident that this place was a wort of catch-all for some of Amos' blame Cliff for letting her walk home
