SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1918

When we talk about "getting on," we mean getting more money. Christ never "got on."—Hugh Price Hughes.

REGRETTABLE INCIDENT

THE dismissal of two respectable colored boys from Dickinson College, where they had been students—one for three years and the other for one—because they were negroes, and for no other reason, is a regrettable thing, but it is worse than that when all the circumstances are considered.

WE MUST DO IT

THE whole Harrisburg district is below its Liberty Loan quota. "We must make up the deficit; we must buy our share of the bonds," says Chairman Patterson; and with that we all agree.

COMPLETE SURRENDER

THERE is a universal demand throughout the country for unconditional surrender on the part of Germany. No other sort of peace will be satisfactory to the American people.

I believe in a God of justice as well as a God of mercy. When the time comes to balance the account—and it seems to be drawing near—the avassals of Germany seek refuge from the day of wrath—the authors of the frightful wrongs committed against mankind should not be forgotten.

The Secretary of State has likewise indicated the conviction of those in authority in his statement that the German military leaders and their forces will be defeated, that the hour of triumph is drawing near and that the day of the war lulls is almost over.

Politics in Pennsylvania

Plans for the Republican state candidates to start their campaign work next week have been materially affected by the influenza outbreak

It is the belief of his countrymen, however, that the President, now fully advised as to the real attitude of the people, will avoid any act which might further the plans of the retreating foe.

There has not been one minute when Germany and all of Germany, including all the German people, have not been ready to share in the plunder whenever and wherever they could get their hands on it.

The attitude of the whole German nation was defiant and unrelenting when her armies began the drive in March. It was not until after the turn of the tide at Chateau-Thierry in July that she began to relent.

So it naturally follows that our people are disturbed over anything that looks like negotiations with Berlin. They will not be content until the air is once more clear as to our purpose and every vestige of hope that might have been entertained by the Kaiser and his gang shall have been dissipated by some such answer as was made by an American officer when a blindfolded prisoner was sent from the German line to the surrounded Americans on the west front with a demand to surrender.

THE STATE CAMPAIGN

The registration of voters in the city of Altoona slightly exceeds 6,000. When it is remembered that not less than 2,000 of our voters are now serving their country in the field, it will be perceived that the falling off was little more than might have been expected.

There is no longer any doubt of Foch's superiority, both in strategy and tactics, to the German commanders opposed to him. It was demonstrated most brilliantly when he anticipated the German assault on the night of the national fete, July 14, 1918.

His formulas, to adjust himself to new conditions of warfare, if his officers have learned a great deal in the war, so has he. He could now discard much that he used to teach at the Ecole de Guerre, where his pupils, some of them now in high command, worshipped him.

There began that association with British Generals, French, Smith-Dorrien, Haig, Byng, Rawlinson, Allenby and others, who ripened into esteem for their efficiency and faith in their trustworthiness.

When Captain Bairnsfather reached New York, a few days ago, he felt even more strongly than he had felt in France the suicidal ignorance, as he calls it, of Germany in "allowing such a thing to happen as America's getting into the war."

OUR BOYS IN FRANCE

Down in the eastern end of the county there lives a man who has property, a sense of security under our laws and noncombatant ideas when the war is over.

"Say, can't you get the State Police to come out and watch around the county police station?" the lawyer when he told how unknown miscreant Huns had cleaned out the roof.

OUR DAILY LAUGH

LOOKED THAT WAY. Tommy Buzz—My what a big bug lives on that shelf.

WELL KNOWN PEOPLE

—Jacob Seldomridge, of the Lancaster fair, was among Capitol Hill visitors.

COMPENSATIONS

Life's merry compensating ways. On every side we find: When the ice man takes his holiday, the coal man has to grind.

MISUNDERSTOOD

Mrs. Fussbody—Did you call up and ask how Old Mrs. Stickleb is, as I told you? Friend Husband—Yes, and she said his nose of your business how old she is.

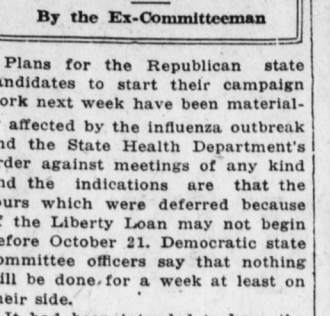

DO YOU KNOW

—That Harrisburg's first serious epidemic was yellow fever about 1790?

HISTORIC HARRISBURG

—When people in Harrisburg thought sanitary conditions were not good they tore down dams and buildings and paid for them afterwards.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST DRIVE

AND FOLLOW THROUGH!!

THE STATE CAMPAIGN

There is no longer any doubt of Foch's superiority, both in strategy and tactics, to the German commanders opposed to him.

There began that association with British Generals, French, Smith-Dorrien, Haig, Byng, Rawlinson, Allenby and others, who ripened into esteem for their efficiency and faith in their trustworthiness.

Knocking B. K. Foch

[From Progress, the official magazine of Birchwood's Relief Fund] The Harrisburg Patriot is now making a miserable effort to crack Benj. Foch, who is the Republican nominee for Congress from the 17th Congressional district at Penna.

TRADE BRIEFS

An important fusion will shortly take place within the Swedish Kullager industry, the Nordiska Kullager A-B having bought the majority of shares in the Baltiska Kullager A-B.

THE STATE CAMPAIGN

[From the Wilkes-Barre Record] There is no more intelligent Democrat who believes that his party's state ticket has the ghost of a show, and it is quite generally conceded that local candidates will go down in the state crash.

Wireless Around the World

One of the greatest achievements of modern science seems to have passed almost unnoticed. A message was sent from Cornwall to Australia, a distance exceeding 12,000 miles, and was received perfectly.

Editorial Comment

Junkerdom is beginning to realize that it is a trifle easier to begin a world war than to win and end one.

Editorial Comment

There can be no peace with Germany except the peace of unconditional surrender.—Kansas City Star.

Editorial Comment

All-the-year-round daylight-saving is now advocated in Congress. But what does Congress do with all the daylight it saves?—New York World.

Editorial Comment

Though the New York Times opposed the giving of the suffrage to the women of New York, it earnestly urges them, now that they have it, to make use of it.
