SPANISH INFLUENZA—JUST GRIP CAMOUFLAGED UNDER A NEW NAME
Most Authorities Now Agree That This Disease Is Simply the Old-Fashioned Grip, the Same That Has Swept Over the World Times Without Number. Since 1831 the United States Has Had Five Epidemics.

The Last Epidemic in 1889-90 Came From Russia by Way of France and Was Given a French Name, La Grippe. This Time It Comes By Way of Spain.

ORIGIN OF THE DISEASE
Spanish Influenza, which appeared in Spain in May, has swept over the world in numerous epidemics as far back as history runs. Hippocrates refers to an epidemic in 412 B. C. which is regarded by many to have been influenza. Every century has had its attacks. Beginning with 1831, this country has had five epidemics, the last in 1889-90.

THE SYMPTOMS
Grip, or influenza as it is now called, usually begins with a chill followed by aching, feverishness and sometimes nausea and dizziness, and a general feeling of weakness and depression. The temperature is from 100 to 104, and the fever usually lasts from three to five days. The germs attack the mucous membrane, or lining of the air passages—nose, throat and bronchial tubes—there is usually a hard cough, especially bad at night, often times a sore throat or tonsillitis, and frequently all the appearances of a severe head cold.

THE TREATMENT
Go to bed at the first symptoms—take a purgative, eat plenty of nourishing food, remain perfectly quiet and don't worry. Nature herself is the only "cure" for influenza and will throw off the attack if only you conserve your strength. A little Quinine, Aspirin or Dover's Powder may be given by the physician's directions to allay the aching. Always call a doctor, since the chief danger of grip is in its weakening effect on the system, which allows complications to develop. These are chiefly pneumonia and bronchitis, sometimes inflammation of the middle ear, or heart affections. For these reasons, it is very important that the patient remain in bed until his strength returns—stay in bed at least two days or more after the fever has left you, or if you are over 50 or not strong, stay in bed four days or more, according to the severity of the attack.

EXTERNAL APPLICATIONS
In order to stimulate the lining of the air passages to throw off the grip germs, to aid in loosening the phlegm and keeping the air passages open, thus making the breathing easier, Vick's VapoRub will be found effective. Hot, wet towels should be applied over the throat, chest and back between the shoulder blades to open the pores. Then VapoRub should be rubbed in over the parts

OFFICER WOUNDED IN BATTLE TELLS OF EXPERIENCE

Captain E. J. Stackpole, Jr., of This City, Hit Twice by Machine-Gun Bullets, Lay All Day on Battlefield in Hot Sun After Falling in Charge on German Positions

Some sensational rumors to the effect that he would lose both legs as a result of machine gun wounds are set at rest in an interesting letter to the home folks by Captain Edward J. Stackpole, Jr., of Harrisburg, who is in a hospital in the United States Army, 110th U. S. Infantry, who is in a base hospital in France. He tells of the attack upon strong German positions and how he was compelled to lie where he fell from ten o'clock in the morning until nine o'clock at night, and sets down what he calls "some impressions" of his latest encounter with the Huns, as follows:

"Once more the Boche had taken up his bed and walked and again we were ordered to follow him. His withdrawal and establish new lines beyond the river toward which he was drawing his men and supplies. The regiment has been repeatedly awakened on its first night of rest after two months of hard fighting and partaking of a hurried breakfast the column was soon ordered to move. A few hours later positions were taken to follow up the enemy's retreat. His usual method of holding up our advance by machine gun fire supported by small bodies of infantry was again employed against us.

"Thoroughly familiar with every foot of the ground we had to cover the Germans could place their guns to the best advantage and did so, with the result that our men were directly into heavy fire as soon as our advancing waves presented a sufficiently favorable target for the enemy. He proceeded at once to demoralize the expressed German intention to kill as possible now that victory was in his hands.

"A daylight advance over level ground, without artillery support, against frontal and flanking machine gun fire is not calculated to succeed without great loss. We kept going, however, until within two hundred yards of the enemy wire, and there dug in for the time being. At this point I was struck by two machine gun bullets and, pitching forward, lost interest in the proceedings. One bullet cut through the left thigh, barely missing the femoral artery and a bunch of nerves, the other splitting the bone in the lower right leg. The idea of being left alone because for me daylight had become night. Up to this point the proceedings had been more or less matter of fact. One becomes accustomed to the usual scenes of the battlefield after he has witnessed two or three engagements, and he can endure sounds and sights that under other circumstances would shatter the nerves of the most phlegmatic. Now, however, I became a bit worried. I had been ordered either to retreat in daylight. It meant sure death at the hands of some German sniper. I had lost much blood and it was only 10.30 in the morning. There was nothing for us but to make the most of my shellhole and wait for darkness to come.

"During the ten hours of torturous heat that followed the water in our canteens was quickly exhausted. Every second was marked by the sound of breathing and groans of one of my men who had been shot through the lungs, and I discovered about 4.30 in the afternoon that I had been using the leg of one of my runners who had been killed as a pillow. I continued to do so. One of my sergeants constructed a sunshade for me by sticking four bayonets into the earth and stretching his shelter-half over them. It was a great relief and his kindness shall never be forgotten.

Col. Pusey Tells of Bursting Shells on the Battlefields of France
Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—Venturing into the danger zone around the front-line trenches while a battle is raging is not considered in any way conducive to one's physical well being or longevity.

Col. Pusey, attorney and former member of the State Legislature from Delaware county, enlisted with his son, Stuart O. Pusey, directly after the declaration of war. The latter is now a first lieutenant in the 108th Field Artillery and, according to recent dispatches from the war zone, has been cited for bravery under fire. He joined the colors as the age of eighteen, while a sophomore at Yale, where he matriculated after graduating from Hill School.

Kennedy's Medicine Store and all druggists sell Rheuma on a no-cure-no-pay basis. A large bottle is inexpensive, and after you take the small dose as directed once a day for two days you should know at last you have obtained a remedy that will conquer rheumatism.

airplane flights above and roads jammed with our moving artillery; trains of ammunition supplies and autos and ambulances returning with wounded and those who have not been picked up by ambulances being carried in on stretchers—on the shoulders of Boche prisoners on their way to a good meal."

Speaking of his experience with exploding shells, Colonel Pusey says: "The first day I had some hairbreadth escapes from high-explosive shells, one of which splashed dirt and leaves in my face and another threw a big jagged steel splinter into the side of the hill beside my path, missing me by an inch or two; then, later, machine gun bullets came knowingly close and one fell a few feet away got three of them, which finished him."

Colonel Pusey has an honorable military record of many years. For twenty years he was adjutant of the old Second Regiment under Colonel Bowman and saw active service during the Spanish-American War. He has been on the military staff of three state executives, Governor Pennypacker, Stuart and Brumbaugh. He resigned about a year ago following the Mexican border uprising, but re-enlisted in April, 1917, when the President called for volunteers.
