"When a Girl Marries"

By ANN LITTLE

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problems of a Girl Wife

Somewhere, once upon a time, I read of a boy who took his sweet-heart home to his mother and, standing proudly with his arm thrown across the girl's shoulder, cried exultantly:

"Mother, isn't she wonderful?"
I remembered that now with a stab of pain. For, as under the compulsion of Virginia Dalton's mocking eyes, I dropped my arms at my side and withdrew from Phoebe's clinging hands and lips, Jim drew closer to his older sister and, flinging his arm about Virginia's shoulders, cried happily and proudly:

"Isn't she wonderful, Anne?"
The very words with which I longed to have him present me to his sisters!
For a moment I was too hurt to reply, then I steeled myself. At least I needn't make Jim ashamed of me.

"She is wonderfully like you, Jim," I said, and turning to Virginia added in what I understood to be a half-sarcasm: "And, of course, that makes you seem 'wonderful' to Jim's wife."
Virginia smiled distantly.
"Naturally. May we freshen up a bit now, Anne?"
I felt that she was holding me off.

Without another word I took Jim's sisters into the bedroom, showed them where things were, and went to get ready for the night.

What Has Never Known Its Equal
The answer has been made by millions—there's only one corn-remover that you can bank on, that's absolutely certain, that makes any corn on earth peel right off like a banana skin—and that's magic "Gets-It" Tight shoes and dancing even when you have a corn need not disturb you if you apply a few drops of "Gets-It" on the corn or callus. You want a corn-remover, not a corn-killer. You don't have to fool with your fingers by using "Gets-It". Cutting makes corns grow and bleed. Why use irritating salves or make a bundle of your toe with tape or bandages? Why putter and still have the corn? Use "Gets-It"—your corn-pain is over. The corn is a "gone" sure as the sun rises.

"Gets-It" is the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover. The only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Mfd. by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill. Sold in Harrisburg and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Clark's Medicine Store, H. C. Kennedy's, A. Gorsas, Keller's Drug Store, F. K. Kitzmiller, C. M. Forney, Golden Seal Drug Co.

"Dear, you were going to telephone the Rochambeau for rooms. As soon as I have had another of Anne's delicious sandwiches, I shall have to think about carrying my little Phoebe off for her beauty salon."
And then I turned and noticed how completely Phoebe had awakened. Neal had paused in his march and was staring down at her pretty, ruffled hair. She looked up and smiled shyly.

"Hui-lo!" said the boy, in great amazement. This wasn't a child—a "kid," as Jim had called her—

LIFE'S PROBLEMS ARE DISCUSSED

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow
Why is it that when anyone says: "How are you?" a simple salutation, by the way, that so many people take it as an invitation to pour forth all the happenings of being and health that have occurred since the last meeting? They will relate every twist and turn that flesh and blood have achieved or imagination pictured. Nor are they diverted by inattention from their purpose to relate every symptom and every detail. They seem to feel it a sacred duty to tell it all.

I was moved to consider this one night, not long ago, when I was obliged to listen to a conversation between a girl and a young officer who had rushed up to say: "How are you?" and many other things, doubtless, had he had a chance, for he breathed health and vigor. But the girl began, she had had the most awful time since she last saw him. Been an invalid. Was yet. And the last, most horrible thing had been the dentist. She talked glibly of X-rays and symptoms and seemed not to consider that there was a mental impediment in thus unveiling her poor body and its ills for the gaze of man.

The young officer broke in once or twice. Said he was so sorry. In an interval he began to tell of some marvelous stunts he had recently seen. One could see that he was an athlete and that there was a mental impediment in thus unveiling her poor body and its ills for the gaze of man.

"My dear Anne, you need not trouble yourself. I am an old New Yorker—and shall manage very nicely—without the Masons," replied. "I shall be very busy hunting an apartment."
"Oh, I'd love to help you, Virginia. If you like I'll call for you at the hotel in the morning and take you to the Mason office. I'm sure they will be able to give you just what you want—they did so well for us," I cried.

"I thought you were a kid," cried Phoebe.
Then they laughed, and the ice was broken. Soon they were deep in the process of getting acquainted. I crossed over to Virginia.
"You won't want to stay long at the hotel, I suppose," I ventured.
"But even while you're there you will come to me for lunch and dinner at least," my sister-in-law replied.

"I'm sorry, Neal," said Phoebe. "I'd—I'd be glad to go anywhere you took me."

Advice to the Lovelorn

MEETING WITHOUT INTRODUCTION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
My sister, a girl friend and I went to a park, where we had a few dances together. While my sister and her friend went on the floor a young man in uniform asked me if I would dance. I accepted, with the thought he was far away from home, serving Uncle Sam, and he was just a piece to make things pleasant. I found him interesting and allowed him to see us home, when I invited him to call. He called for France and on his return trip took my sister and me to the theater and brought us straight home at an early hour. He is again on shore leave, and I received a letter telling me he would like to pay sister and me a visit and could he bring one of his mates with him?
My parents object to his calling on us because we had not been properly introduced. But I know he means
