Democratic Noise
One of the big Philadelphia newspapers remarked the other day that the men in charge of the Democratic papers remarked the other day that the men in charge of the Democratic campaign are "experienced boasters." The state has long noted the skill in that direction of Democratic National Chairman Vance C. McCormick, Democratic National Chairman A.33 Democratic National Committeeman A. Mitchell Palmer and others of that ilk who have run the weather worn Democratic ship on the rocks in spite of a full crew and all needed stores furnished by the President of the United States. Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, the nominee of the Democratic voters for Governor of Pennsylvania in spite of Palmer and McCormick and repudiated by the Democratic state committee, is somewhat of a boaster himself. When not employing their vocal powers in derogation of each other the men of the Democratic factions have been claiming everything in sight. The organized liquor interests who are behind Bonniwell are also experienced in boasting.

And in addition to the volume of

And in addition to the volume of noise created by these discordant elements the President of the United States has trumpeted for election of Democrats to Congress.

President Hurts Party
Indications are that the voters of Pennsylvania will vote heavily for Sproul because he typifies the stand of the people in regard to Prohibition and for Republicans for the various offices because they resent White House interference in state affairs and the employment for personal aggrandizement of a war in which

House interference in state affairs and the employment for personal aggrandizement of a war in which Pennsylvania has given more than a tenth of men and supplies.

Impressions generally are that the President's appeal has hurt his party's candidates as much as the action of the McCormick-Palmer controlled state committee damaged its works in repudiating the nominee of a direct primary.

In addition to the strength of Sproul as a "dry" candidate there is everywhere recognition that he has the business ability required to reorganize the state government after the war strain is lifted just as the people realize that Republican Congressmen should be sent to Washington to protect the industries and welfare of the Keystone Commonwealth. Pennsylvania always feels trade conditions; often among the first. Southern economists have more than once hurt the business structure of Pennsylvania and injured the interests of labor.

This is going to be another Repubiabor.

This is going to be another Republican year. The Republican party is united. The primary left no sores. The staunchest supporter of Senator Sproul is J. Denny O'Neil, the man he defeated, and his friends are behind the experienced legislator and capable businessman from Delaware county, So are "dry" men without regard to party. Only a fragment of the Prohibition party, struggling to maintain a place in the archives, clings to its gubernatorial nominee. The rest are for Sproul. And so, it may be said, are many Democrats who bow no knee to party bosses.

Congressional Battles
National attention has been attracted to the Dauphin-Cumberland-Lebanon district, which is the home of Democratic National Chairman Vance C. McCormick and has no Democratic candidate for congress at all, and interest hinges on the 16th, 17th and 20th in the South Central end, and the 10th, 11th and 21st up the state with some in the 12th or Schuylkill district. The latter is not regarded as debateable since George Franklin Brumm got out of the race aid the election of John Reber, Pottsville Republican, to represent the big anthracite county is as certain as the re-election of Edgar R. Kelss in the Williamsport district and of W. W. Griest in Lancaster.
